PRESIDENT WINS OHIO DELEGATES AFTER HOT FIGHT IN CONVENTION

Roosevelt At-Large Slate Beaten at Columbus by Vote of 388½ to 364½, and Taft Administration Gets Indorsement

NATIONAL FIGHT SHARPLY WAGED

POLITICAL SUMMARY.

President Taft carries the Ohio State Convention, capturing six delegates-at-large.

Roosevelt calls for the defeat of Root for temporary chairman of the Republican National Convention.

South Dakota is voting today in presidential primaries.

Senator Kenyon defeats Lafayette Young in Iowa senatorial primaries.

COLUMBUS, O., June 4—President Taft won a decisive victory over Colonel Roosevelt in the Republican State convention today, capturing the six delegates-at-large to the national convention by a vote of 388½ to 364½.

That the Taft forces had control of the convention was first brought out when the temporary organization was made permanent and Senator Burton, the President's supporter, became permanent chairman.

The mention of Taft's name in the resolution endorsing his administration was cheered, but when a minority report carrying an endorsement of Roosevelt was offered, the convention went into a demonstration which lasted for several minutes.

The minority report of the resolutions committee, providing for the endorsement of Colonel Roosevelt, was lost by a vote of 358½ to 393½. This showed conclusively that the Taft men were in complete control.

Endorse Taft Administration.

The majority report endorsing the Taft administration was adopted without a roll call. It was as follows:

"Resolved, That we heartily endorse the administration of President William H. Taft."

ROOSEVELT MAKES CHOICE OF ROOT THE TEST IN CONVENTION

OYSTER BAY, June 4—After a seven-hour conference with leaders in his campaign, Colonel Roosevelt dictated an 1,800-word statement at Sagamore Hill, in which he defies the Taft cohorts to try to elect Elihu Root as temporary chairman of the Chicago convention.

In coming out decisively against Root, the ex-President abruptly recedes from the tentative position he assumed last Saturday, when he was urged by aggressives of Roosevelt delegates to abandon the fight on the Senator.

Roosevelt's decision to push his war against Root was advised by Senator Dixon, National Committeeman Ward of New York, George W. Perkins, Medill McCormick of Chicago and Frank B. Kellogg, the Standard Oil prosecutor, who were in today's Sagamore Hill conference.

The Roosevelt Statement.

Following is the Roosevelt statement, in part:

In the past Mr. Root has rendered distinguished service as Secretary of State and Secretary of War. But in this contest Mr. Root ranged himself against the men who stand for progressive principles within the Republican party—that is, against the men who stand for making the Republican party in relation to the issues of the present day what it was in the days of Abraham Lincoln. He stands as the representative of the men and the policies of reaction. He is put forward by the bosses and the representatives of special privilege.

What has recently come to my knowledge makes it clear that it is

$3000 FINE PENALTY OF PROMOTER

Victor M. Weil, stock promoter and alleged head of a big scheme to get money from the public, brought his trial in the United States District Court in a close today when he pleaded guilty before Judge Putnam and a jury to charges of using the mails in a scheme to defraud.

Judge Putnam imposed a fine of $3,000. No mention was made of imprisonment. In imposing the fine, Judge Putnam made a distinction between the initiative and the afterthought" in the use of the mails in schemes o defraud. Lawyers in the court stated this ruling might be regarded as new, and likely to attract great attention.

Judge Putnam said:

"When Weil started in business, he did not scheme, I think, to use the mails to carry out his plans. He established his mining properties, and later made use of suggestions of his friends or his own ideas in taking up the mails. This, I think, was an afterthought, and therefore the crime was not so grave as if Weil had started with the use of the mails in his business.

"Heavy sentences cause a reaction in these matters, while a just penalty imposed acts as a better stay to the furthering of fraud schemes."

Dramatic Ending.

The end of the case which has cost the government more than $10,000, was almost dramatic. Shortly before noon John P. Feeney, of counsel for the broker, arose.

"We will agree to let our client plead guilty to the charge," he said, "provided the United States district attorney may not make any statement."

Weil rose from his chair and faced Judge Putnam.

"I desire to change my plea from one of not guilty to one of guilty," he declared.

After Weil was fined he was placed inside the grating of the marshal's office, near a desk, but was not put into a cage. There Weil remained under the eyes of the federal authorities until his fine could be paid.

The Specific Complaint.

The specific charge in the government's complaint was that the defendant sent through the mails a circular addressed to Hattie Mitchell, P. O. Box 32, Malden, December 15, 1908, and the complaint was based upon Weil's operation in the production of what was known as the Ohio Chemical exploration corporation, which was represented to embrace certain mining properties in Alaska and some distant western points.

He was also the logical head of the "Inter-Trust security company," which dealt in and promoted various securities and did a very heavy business among a large number of people in New England and the East.

For several years the government authorities had been trying to get evidence on which Weil could be arrested. Weil was finally taken into custody on January 6, 1911, following a raid on his offices at No. 7 Water street.

Three or four years ago the government inspectors thought they had evidence on which to prosecute him, but it turned out that the property on which the complaints were then considered was located in a remote part of Alaska, and the complaint was abandoned when it was found that it would be necessary to make a snowshoe or dog sled trip of 150 miles to find the most essential witnesses.

Victor M. Weil first attained local prominence in 1905, when he was making his home in Hyde Park and published a local paper there.

In the Fall of 1905, Weil was elected president of the Hyde Park board of trade and soon incurred the displeasure of the citizens of the town when he caused to be issued, on letterheads of the board, an announcement that the organization was to give a grand charity ball on December 20 of that year, the proceeds of which were to be devoted to the care of the poor of the town.

Was Prominent in Hyde Park.

At that the business men rose in protest, especially as there was a fund in the town treasury to care for the poor, and at a special meeting of the board of trade resolutions were adopted calling off the ball and the money refunded.

December 15 a mass meeting was held and resolutions to the effect that "in view of the record and career of the said Victor M. Weil in this town, we hereby demand that he seek another residence and relieve the town of further responsibility for his citizenship."

WOMAN FATALLY HURT BY AUTO

Miss Mary Degnan, thirty years old, of No. 80 Union Park street, was probably fatally injured today by an automobile belonging to Ralph W. Gloag, an attorney, at Columbus and Massachusetts avenues. Miss Degnan was hurried to the City Hospital in the machine. Her skull is fractured and the doctors said she would die.

Miss Degnan was crossing Columbus avenue when she was struck. Mr. Gloag, who was driving, applied the brakes quickly, then ran back to where the woman lay and took the victim to the hospital. Miss Degnan did not regain consciousness.

Mr. Gloag has an office in the Pemberton building, Pemberton square, and lives at No. 774 Broadway, South Boston.

BROWN BILL IS AGAIN REJECTED

The House of Representatives today again refused to agree to the Brown bill for the direct nomination of United States Senators by the people, which has passed the Senate. The House insists on the Dunwell bill providing for the direct nomination and preferential election of Senators.

The question in the House today was on concurring with the action of the Senate in substituting the Brown bill for the Dunwell measure. The vote in the House was 94 in favor of concurrence to 143 against. The House asked for the appointment of a committee of conference to try to get together on a compromise measure.

The general opinion a the State House tosy was that the Committee of Conference will fail to reach any agreement and that the measure will die between the two branches which will mean no legislation along this line this year.

BATES AND GIRL RUSH TO BE WED

PROVIDENCE, June 4—Frank M. Bates, a wealthy jewelry manufacturer of Providence, hurried up from that city today, met his beautiful bride-to-be, Miss Nan Corrigan, former news agent at the Hotel Vanderbilt, in New York, when she arrived here on the noon express, and then motored across the State line into Connecticut.

"I don't like the idea of waiting five days to be married at home in Attleboro," the bridegroom told the reporters. "That's where the Massachusetts laws are too slow. We're going to be married in Connecticut this afternoon."

Bates, the romance of whose wooing of the pretty news girl has aroused the interest of three States, said he did not know what minister would perform the ceremony. With the party was Miss Anna Regan, of New York, Miss Corrigan's chum. Bates's wedding presents to Miss Corrigan are a diamond necklace, a touring car and a four-karat diamond ring.

"After the wedding we're coming back to Attleboro to live with my mother," said Bates. "I shall still keep up my business in Providence."

Won in Race for Favor.

Miss Corrigan is twenty, with jet black hair, big brown eyes, olive complexion and a petite and graceful figure. Bates won her after a lively race for favor, in which a rich Buffalo widower was the other contestant. Flowers, candy, theatre tickets and jewelry they cast at her feet, but gradually the Attleboro man drew ahead, till at last all Nan's smiles were for him.

Mrs. M. Bates, mother of the groom, approves. When she heard of the plans for the marriage, she went to New York and met Miss Corrigan.

"My son, you have selected wisely," she assured him.

Miss Corrigan is madly; foolishly in love with Mr. Bates. In a rosy glow of excitement over her wedding plans, she told of how they first met and how she loved him almost from the first moment.

One of the first persons to register at the Vanderbilt the day it opened was Bates. He strolled over to the newsstand to buy a book. So fascinated was he with the pretty girl behind the counter that he came back every few minutes and bought more books, until Miss Corrigan's stock was exhausted.

"How did I happen to accept Frank?" cried Miss Nan. "Why, I loved him when he came to buy my next book, and it nearly drove me crazy that I had no more books to sell him that day. I was tempted to buy them all back and let him begin over."

"He is the nicest fellow. He's so big and strong and so unaffected. But you must see what he has given me for a wedding present."

The pretty little brunette was slipping something off and on her finger when Douglas Brown, the hotel manager, approached and asked:

"What have you got there, Nan?"

Miss Corrigan blushed, then stammered; "Mr. Brown, I've got to quit tonight. I'm going to be married. This is my engagement ring."

She exhibited a four-karat diamond. "Whom are you to marry, Miss Nan?" the hotel manager asked.

Makes Wedding Plans.

"Mr. Frank M. Bates," she replied. "I must leave you and get ready for my wedding."

Prior to going to the Vanderbilt Miss Corrigan had been employed at the Hotel Belmont. There a rich Buffalo widower fell desperately in love and begged her to marry him.

"But there's such a difference in our ages," she told him.

Miss Corrigan had long hours. She reported for work at 6 a. m., went home at noon, was back at her desk at 6 and remained on duty until midnight. The first night she started for her home, No. 100 West Ninety-eighth street, two men were waiting to escort her. One was the Buffalo widower, the other the young Bostonian, who had obtained a formal introduction.

"I will go with both of you," she said. The two men glared at each other.

Then the rivals began to pay costly court to the little newsgirl. Flowers came daily. Also there were boxes of sweets and other gifts. Gradually the younger suitor forged ahead. He proposed and was accepted. The man from Buffalo left the hotel.

START MONEY TRUST INQUIRY THURSDAY

WASHINGTON, June 4—The Money Trust investigation will begin in New York city next Thursday. This decision was reached by the House Committee on Banking and Currency today.

'L' UNION MEETING THURSDAY

The union employes of the Elevated Railroad today called a meeting for Thursday night, to begin just after midnight, to discuss the critical situation that has resulted from the controversy between the management and the men.

In the meantime the most prominent labor leaders of the State in conjunction with members of the New England Civic Federation, will see General Bancroft and try to induce him to waive his decision that he will not meet a committee of the organized men.

A committee of "loyals"—that is, employes who say they are loyal to the company—met today at No. 827 Shawmut avenue and received written grievances from men on the road. These grievances were not signed. When the grievances are all received and classified, the committee says, they will be presented to General Bancroft.

Fred Fay, international organizer, who has charge of the organization work, said today:

"I was glad to read the editorial today in the AMERICAN advocating the getting together of the men and the management of the road. That is exactly what we have advocated. We have favored arbitration."

"CHOICE OF ROOT WOULD REPUDIATE MY PRINCIPLES"

"Mr. Root's selection as Temporary Chairman of the National Convention would be a repudiation of the principles for which I stand and an indorsement of the doctrines enunciated at the Rochester convention, doctrines not merely reactionary, but of such a character that no party professing them could carry a single State in this Union. These doctrines are so bourbon and reactionary that every Northern State, after full discussion, has overwhelmingly repudiated them."

—Mr. Roosevelt's statement.

Just before the White Star liner Arabic sailed for Queenstown and Liverpool today, a policeman rushed aboard and said Miss Augusta Sandberg that her brother was dying in the East Boston relief station. The young woman hurried to the relief station, leaving all her baggage. Miss Sandberg was bound for Sweden for the Summer.

The Arabic carried sixty-six saloon, 125 second cabin and 300 steerage passengers. Among the passengers were Alexander Kahn and his two children. ROOSEVELT DEMANDS THE DEFEAT OF ROOT

a question of the absolute duty of every progressive Republican to oppose the selection as temporary chairman at Chicago of any man put forward in the interests of the supporters of Mr. Taft in this contest. I have before me a copy of the following telegram sent to a Roosevelt delegate from Pennsylvania:

"Mr. Philip K. Barnes:

"The national committee has selected Senator Root of New York for temporary chairman of the convention at Chicago. It is rumored that the Roosevelt forces will oppose the action of the committee. I am writing you in behalf of the New York delegation, with the exception of a very few, to ask your support for Senator Root for temporary chairman. We believe this contest is the most serious one which has afflicted the Republican party and that the attempt to nominate Mr. Roosevelt can lead only to disaster. The doctrines which he has advocated we declared in our platform at the Rochester convention to be subversive of our form of government. Will you please write me in New York city, collect, whether we can rely on your support for Senator Root for temporary chairman.

"WILLIAM BARNES, JR."

"Telegrams like this have been sent to a great number of the delegates, apparently to a great majority of them. This telegram makes the issue perfectly clear. It is one of principles, not persons. Mr. Barnes demands Mr. Root's selection as the sign of repudiation of the principles for which I stood and as an indorsement of the doctrines enunciated at the Rochester convention—doctrines not merely reactionary, but of such a character that no party professing them could carry a single State in this Union.

"These doctrines are so Bourbon and reactionary that in every open primary in every Northern State since the Rochester convention was held, after full discussion the people have overwhelmingly repudiated them. This telegram of Mr. Barnes shows that the plan announced in the press is true, and that the leader and real head of Mr. Taft's canvass at Chicago is to be Mr. Barnes, whom Mr. Taft and his managers have chosen to represent and embody the principles for which Mr. Taft stands, a choice which casts an illuminating light on Mr. Taft's relations both to the bosses in politics and to special interests in the business world.

"In the next place it makes it perfectly clear that Mr. Root was pushed for nomination only with the purpose to secure the defeat of the principles for which the progressive Republicanism stands, the principles for which the people have declared themselves by overwhelming majorities in three States where there have been popular primaries.

"Mr. Root's personality becomes unimportant in view of Mr. Barnes' program. Mr. Barnes stands as the representative of the very worst forms of boodle in politics. Is the Republican delegates can afford to vote for any man proposed by Barnes and his allies, for any such vote is a vote against principle and against the basic principles not merely of the Republican party but of decent American citizenship.

"This is not a political fight in the ranks of the Republican party. It is a fight between the plain people, the rank and file of the Republican party, making up the immense majority of that party, on the one hand, and on the other the bosses, with back of them the special interests and the big business which are endeavoring to sustain the cause of privilege by the perfection of a combination between crooked politics and crooked business.

"There have been direct political preferential primaries so far in the States of Illinois, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Ohio, New Jersey, North Dakota, Maryland, California, Oregon, and Nebraska. In these States I have been voted against. Mr. Taft has been between two and three to one, and often more than that, and he has secured only thirty-eight delegates out of a total of 344.

"In certain other States, Minnesota, Missouri, Kansas, Maine, New Hampshire, West Virginia, Rhode Island, Vermont, there were primaries which, while not direct Presidential primaries, still give a rough approximation of the actual sentiment of the people. In these States I secured 154 delegates and Mr. Taft secured 17, with three instructed.

"In those cases where the Republican voters have had a fair chance to express their convictions they have repudiated Mr. Taft so completely that he has been able to obtain less than one-eighth of the delegates, his popular vote being but one to three or four, and in some cases only one in nine or ten.

"Taft Unequivocally Repudiated."

"The great majority of the Republican party have unequivocally repudiated Mr. Taft. If in every one of the Republican voters could be given fair expression, Mr. Taft would have but a corporal's guard at the convention.

"Under these circumstances it is fitting and appropriate that Mr. Barnes should be chosen to lead the Taft forces in Chicago in the effort to override the expressed wish of the rank and file of the party, and to give the nomination to the candidate whom the party has explicitly and beyond all question repudiated.

"No man should be chosen a temporary chairman who is put forward by Mr. Barnes and those men who represent the principles and practices of Mr. Barnes, for any such man could not but be held responsible for the reactionary Bourbonism of the Rochester platform and for the views expressed in Mr. Barnes' telegram quoted above.

"Under these circumstances Mr. Root's own personality is not the issue. His victory would be the victory of Mr. Barnes, his defeat the defeat of Mr. Barnes."

OHIO CONVENTION REOPENS WITH TAFT LEADERS HOPEFUL

COLUMBUS, O., June 4.—When the Republican State convention resumed this session today the Taft forces were confident and prepared to use iron-handed methods in controlling the selection of the six Chicago delegates-at-large. Their confidence was a result of success in controlling committee meetings, and it was expected the strength they had shown in the committees would be reflected on the floor. There was one source of worry, however, the re-election as chairman of the State Central Committee of Will M. Brown, Roosevelt manager in Ohio.

While Brown termed his re-election a personal victory, the Roosevelt men were enthusiastic in their belief it had deeper meaning, and that the three Taft leaders who had voted for Brown would swing strength to the Roosevelt faction and enable it to turn the tables on the Taft president's supporters. A majority report indorsing the administration, presented by the resolutions committee, stirred the Roosevelt men, and they went into the convention with a minority report providing for the postponement of the presentation of any platform or resolutions until after the Chicago convention.

The first real test of strength came with the report of the committee on credentials, which submitted a report seating the contested Taft delegates. This was adopted without a roll call.

ALABAMA SWITCH COMFORTS TAFT'S CHICAGO WORKERS

CHICAGO, June 4.—That the switch of the Alabama delegates to the Republican convention from Taft to Roosevelt heralds a scramble was the jubilant shout today of the Roosevelt followers already here. Their claim is denied by the Taft men, who are here in equal numbers, and statements fluttering from the headquarters of the factions gave Chicago a genuine convention air.

That the forces are lining up for a great struggle was apparent, and the earnestness of the chatting groups of politicians in the hotel lobbies indicated they recognized the importance of the contest bearings that will open Thursday before the National Committee. Already party leaders have begun to arrive. By tonight it was expected most of the members of the National Committee would be here. Colonel Cecil Lyon, National Committeeman from Texas, friend and lieutenant of the former President; Sidney Peixotto of the District of Columbia, a Roosevelt supporter; General Powell Clay, Arkansas and Ira Nelson Chase of Florida, Taft supporters, are here for the delegate fights. Telegrams at the Roosevelt headquarters announced that Senator Dixon, campaign manager for the Colonel, would be here today. Dixon hurried to Oyster Bay for a final conference. That one of the fights is to be directed against Senator Root for temporary chairman caused surprise among Roosevelt's men here. Yesterday they had given out the statement that no opposition to Root would be made.

TAFT COMFORT FROM ALABAMA

passengers are carried every day, and 16,438 round-trips made from the twenty-seven "barns," on the ten divisions mainfained by the road.

Conductors and motormen receive 23 cents an hour for the first year's service, which gradually is increased until they are given 28 cents an hour, at the end of sixteen years. The men regulars, under a recent order, are guaranteed $12 a week as a minimum wage regardless of the actual number of hours worked, provided certain requirements are met.

The men now work on a ten-hour basis, but will be placed on a nine-hour-a-day hour day by statute law January 1 next. This has resulted in a proposal by the management to pay them the same day-rate for a nine-hour day as is computed to be equivalent to a ten per cent. wage increase.

With this addition, the company estimates, the men have been given an advance of 30 per cent. in wages during the last ten years, as well as $535,500 in cash bonuses and mutualaid contributions unreturned by the management.

Of the 5,000 men in the uniformed service of the company, the men's union today claim a membership of 3,500. Their demands call for the following pay rates:

First year, surface conductors and motormen, 28 cents; second year, 30 cents; third year, and after, 32 cents. Elevated lines, first year, 30 cents; second year, 32 cents; third year, 35 cents. Guards, first year, 25 cents; second year, 27 cents; third year, 29 cents. Subway, first year, 23 cents, second year, 25 cents, third year, 27 cents.

They further demand a minimum, guaranteed wage of $12 a week for all conductors and motormen, with $1.65 for nine hours and $1.60 for eight hours' work of the men report for duty, and full recognition of the union. Also, the reinstatement of those discharged for having joined the organization.

Arbitration of all disputes that may arise is made part of their proffered agreement. But they object to making possible through an arbitration board made up of three men agreed upon by them and their union, one by the company, and these two to select the third man.

Before a strike can obtain in this city, it will be necessary for the question to carry in the men's union by a two-thirds vote, on a secret ballot, and later receive the sanction of the International executive committee of the general union.

The so-called "loyals" in the company's employ, who have not yet joined the union, assert that the number of union men is not half of the 5,000 claimed, and that at least 3,000 of the 5,000 unfirmed, twelve men will stick by the company in case of a strike.

NO FANCY FROCKS FOR WASHINGTON GIRLS

WASHINGTON, June 4.—There is grief today among the fair members of the school graduating classes, for silk and satins, low necks and short sleeves, ruffs and flue evening gowns have had no part in the commencement attire of Washington's graduates this year. The subtle charm and elegance so noticeable in brilliant, fluffy hair is possible for every woman to have and enjoy if she will but shampoo occasionally with a canthrox mixture, made by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water. This creates a wealth of rich, white lather that cleanses thoroughly and completely. The stimulating effect of this shampoo on the scalp will encourage a bountiful growth of beautiful hair.

Women who safeguard their beauty do not use powder or greasy creams, because of their injurious effect upon the skin. Instead, a spurmax lotion is used. This is made by dissolving 4 ounces of spurmax in 1 pint witch hazel (or hot water) and adding 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. The spurmax lotion protects the skin and gives to the daintiest complexion a rare charm and elegance. To rough, oily, faded skins it lends a velvety smoothness and exquisite tint.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Senator Kern of Indiana will today begin a series of speeches on the Lorimer case, in his capacity as leader of the minority of the investigating committee which found bribery in the Lorimer elections.

Senator Lorimer has resumed his seat in the Senate in the rear row of the chamber.

His appearance attracted little attention, a few senators greeting him as they recognized him in his accustomed place.

Senator Lorimer refused to discuss his plans, beyond saying that he would make a speech in his defense and that he regarded the Senate as the place in which to deliver any statement he cared to make.

"I have nothing to say regarding a resignation," he said, "and I am not going to discuss that question. I have been ill and am still weak, but I am improving and I shall speak if my strength holds out."

CARNEGIE WOULD CHOOSE SENATOR ROOT AFTER TAFT

LONDON June 4.—Andrew Carnegie has expressed some decided opinions on who he can politics, slightly switching his former intense admiration for Roosevelt to an equal devotion to Taft, with Root as second choice for the presidency if Taft fails of nomination.

The Democrats, to his mind, have almost no chance of success, but have several good men. Mr. Carnegie said:

"If I were to nominate their candidate, he would be Mayor Gaynor of New York. Governor Harmon is a splendid man. Underwood is evidently a sound statesman, and Champ Clark is most excellent in every way, only possibly he may talk too much at times. But with any of these four the nation would be safe.

"If I had to name a candidate, however, other than the President, and this only if he should fail of nomination—which may the kind fates forbid—it would be Senator Root, whom President Roosevelt repeatedly pronounced 'the wisest man he ever knew.'

"He would make a great record. Ex-President Roosevelt is reputed to have declared he would crawl on his hands and knees from the White House to the Capitol if he could make Root President."

CLARK PLEDGED VOTE OF IDAHO

Speaker Champ Clark won the eight delegates from Idaho to the Baltimore convention and the State committee adopted resolutions, not only instructing the delegates to support Clark, but warmly commending the Speaker's course in Congress.

The vote endorsing Clark for President was unanimous and cast amid great enthusiasm. The eight delegates were instructed under the unit rule to use all honorable means to bring about his nomination for the Presidency and to stick to him as long as his name was before the convention. The delegates will be chosen at the session today.

This gives the Speaker 412 instructed delegates, not counting any from Pennsylvania; as against 235 for Wilson (granting him all 76 from Pennsylvania), 84 for Underwood, 50 for Harmon, 30 for Marshall, 4 for Bryan and 1 for Burke.

Primaries are being held today in South Dakota. This is the last State to hold primaries for the choice of Republican delegates. President Taft, Colonel Roosevelt and Senator La Follette have tickets in the field and all are anxious for the ten votes for the effect it may have upon the uninstructed delegates.

Speaker Clark and Governor Wilson have tickets in the South Dakota primaries. Governor Harmon has made no effort whatever in the State. The sentiment is all toward Clark.

Governor Wilson of New Jersey bids fair to lose the nineteen delegates he secured in Ohio by the duplication of the unit rule. Governor Harmon won his home State on appeal, by a majority of nearly 12,000 and secured 29 of the 48 delegates.

TAFT PARDONS MAN IN LAND FRAUD CASE

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Willard N. Jones at Portland, Ore., convicted of land frauds in the famous cases in which the late Senator Mitchell of Oregon and Binger Hermann, former commissioner of the general land office, were alleged to have been implicated, will never have to serve a day of his sentence, as President Taft has just granted him an unconditional pardon. He never has served a day of his sentence. The pardon was based on the grounds that improper methods has been employed in filling the jury box from which the Jones jury was drawn.

BROOKLINE BUILDING CODE NOT CHANGED YET

It may be six months more before Brookline's new building laws become effective, although it has been reported that they were to go into effect the first of this month. They are in the hands of Attorney-General Swift, who has not as yet passed upon them. During the month of May an unusually large number of permits was issued by the building commissioner for the erection of three-apartment houses, which all may come under the provisions of the new laws, which advocate safe and sane methods included in the erection of apartment houses and the cheaper class of residences.

For Sallow, Wrinkled, Freckled, Pimpled Skin

(From Woman's Home Journal.)

If you have any cutaneous blemish, don't use paints, powder or anything else to cover it up. Too often this only emphasizes the defect. Besides, it's much easier to remove the disfigurement with ordinary mercolized wax. Applied nightly, the wax will gradually remove freckles, pimples, blackheads, moth patches, sallowness, red or yellow blotches, or any surface eruptions. The wax is entirely absorbed, a little each day, until the clear, soft, youthful and beautiful skin beneath is brought gradually to view. Ask the druggist for an ounce of mercolized wax and use this like you use cold cream. Remove in morning with soap and water. Many who have tried this simple and harmless treatment report astonishing results.

If bothered with wrinkles, sagging cheeks or double chin, a wash lotion made by dissolving an ounce of saxolite in a half-pint witch hazel will prove effectual.

GRAND TRUNK VICTORY NEAR

The Grand Trunk bill today reached the final lap of its victorious progress through the Legislature on the way to the desk and pen of Governor Foss.

Passed yesterday by the Senate to be engrossed, the bill is back in the House for concurrence in the Senate amendments. As the branches are at present splitting a calendar day into two legislative days, in the hope of prorogation this week, the Grand Trunk bill may be reached today.

Members of the House, who are sincerely anxious to bring a new railroad into Massachusetts to compete with the Morgan monopoly of New England transportation say they will urge speedy concurrence with the Senate amendments and the sealing of the bill to the Governor.

Early today there was a revival of the rumor that Governor Foss will veto the Grand Trunk bill unless he gets his public Utilities Commission. And again the rumor was denied by the Governor's friends. The tension at the State House can only be described as electrical.

The final day in the Senate began with the suggestion of Senator Ezra W. Clark of Brockton, Republican, that the bill ought to be sent for a while to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Dr. Clark was quite sure about this. His suggestion raised such a protest, led by Brown and Lennassey, that he thought better of it, withdrew it, and sat down.

Then Senator Brown of Medford, nearly forty years Dr. Clark's junior, came to the front again with that amendment of his which provided that no railroad shall charge a lower freight rate to any other Atlantic port than it charges to the Port of Boston.

Senator Brown succeeded last week in having this amendment tacked onto the Grand Trunk portion of the bill.

It wants to be remembered that Part I. of the Grand Trunk Bill is a "special" act, applying only to the Grand Trunk, while Part II. is a "general" bill, affecting all railroads in Massachusetts.

The Senate took the amendment out, but when the matter was up to roll-call—and in spite of Senator Schoonmaker's warning that it will hurt the Port of Boston more than it will help, wrote it into the general railroad law of the State.

The William M. Flanders amendment was now presented to the Senate by Senator Henry C. Mulligan of Natick.

TAFT'S TRAVEL BILL OVER LIMIT

By ALFRED HENRY LEWIS.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—These be strenuous days and Taft is in trouble again. His trouble this time is with the House Appropriations Committee. Also it is not political, but financial. Mr. Taft turned in a traveling account largely in excess of the annual $25,000 allowed a President by the generous Watson bill passed in 1907. One cannot run up and down the face of railroad nature and call for private cars and special trains in doing so without bursting up the dollars. It costs money to cross and re-cross the country, utilizing special railroad facilities, side tracking regular trains and that your purpose in doing so is to explain to the American people that they ought to renominate and reelect you President doesn't render the cost less.

The Taft accounts to the vibrant tune of thousands in excess of the regular appropriation have thrown Chairman Fitzgerald and his colleagues of the Appropriations Committee into mighty disorder. They don't know what to do. There is the Watson law, which puts the presidential limit for traveling at $25,000 a year, and Fitzgerald and his colleagues know of no congressional machinery by which that limit can be lifted.

Uncle Joe Cannon was called to the White House yesterday. Cannon is no admirer of Taft and the political hammering the latter has of late received served only to excite the merriment of our ex-Speaker. However, Cannon wasn't called to the White House to consider politics. It was as the ranking Republican of the Committee on Appropriations that he was invited and went. Cannon went over the White House traveling account and was constrained to confess himself as utterly helpless as Fitzgerald.

The accounts had been most ingeniously put together at that and all with a prudent purpose of keeping down a total

REAL ROMANCE STIRS SCHOOL

A real romance is delighting Brighton High School girls. They are whistling and giggling in corners, at every spare minute. For their schoolmate, seventeen-year-old Lillian Brauer, has eloped with a classmate, William Mohan, and the two are on their wedding trip.

The marriage took place May 19—just a month before the High School commencement. The girl is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Brauer of No. 425 Cambridge street, Allston.

While Mohan and Miss Brauer had been seen together often, it was not suspected, even by her closest friends, that they intended to be married. Even when she left school so suddenly, few suspected the real cause.

Gradually the details of the romance are becoming known. The two had been in the habit of meeting near the school and walking together. On the day of the elopement they went early in the afternoon to the bride's home, while her parents were away, packed a suit case with her belongings and came to Boston.

A minister married them and they left on a honeymoon without notifying anyone of their destination. A friend saw them late at the South Station.

Before they left Boston, Mohan telephoned to the office of the Fairbanks Scale Company, where he is employed, stating that he was married and would be absent for some time on a wedding trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Brauer refuse to talk about their daughter's wedding. Patrick J. Mohan, father of the young, admitted that his son and Miss Brauer had been married two weeks ago, but said he does not know where they are.

Neither of the parents would state whether they would take any action because of the fact that the bride was under age.

Wills All to "Lady Betty" Henderson's Wedding Gift

NEW PHOTOGRAPH OF MRS. F. C. HENDERSON

Marriage Licenses Hit New Mark at City Registrar's Office as Mercury Soars.

NEW YORK, June 4.—"Lady Betty" Chapman Pierce, who last Tuesday night became the bride of Frank Clarence Henderson, the millionaire oil man, received an unusual wedding present under extraordinary circumstances. A few hours after the marriage, when the couple boarded the Lusitania preparatory to sailing for England, Mr. Henderson made a new will, leaving his entire fortune to his wife and giving her the immediate income from a number of his properties.

Word of the romantic action of Mr. Henderson reached here from passengers on the Lusitania to whom the bride told the facts. She declared that after the ceremony Mr. Henderson said he had a surprise for her, but did not intimate what it was until they boarded the steamer. In their stateroom they found two lawyers. They had prepared the will under Mr. Henderson's direction and he executed it in the presence of the bride.

286 GRADUATES AT TECHNOLOGY

President MacLaurin handed degrees to 286 young men, graduates of the Class of 1912, at the commencement exercises of Technology today.

There were graduated two hundred and fifty-eight bachelors of science (B. S.); twenty-two masters of science (M. S.) and six doctors of philosophy (Ph. D.).

President Maclaurin, speaking to the graduates today said:

"Last year, we closed the first chapter of the history of the Institute, the record of half a century's existence. Now we have turned the page and entered upon a new chapter, and if the tone of that chapter is to be guessed from that of its opening phrases we can not fail to be impressed by the contrast between the old and the new.

"These will be founded in favor of William Barton Rogers, founder of the Institute, a professorship of Economic Geology. This is to be an endowed chair devoted chiefly to scholarly research, in the domain of geology, and to it first occupant is to be Professor Waldemar Lindgren, eldest geologist to the United States government, a member of the National Academy of Sciences and a worthy successor to Rogers in the field of his own specialty."

SOCIETIES PLAN A SANE FOURTH

Practically every organization in Boston has been invited to take part in a public meeting Friday afternoon at City Hall to arrange for features for the celebration of July Fourth in Boston. It is expected the meeting will result in the formation of a Citizens' Independence Day Association, whose aim it will be to see that the day is observed in a safe and sane manner.

In a statement made today, John F. Dever, the newly appointed Director of Public Celebrations, says the association should consist of at least 200 to 300 citizens, including representatives of every part of the city and all of Boston's interests.

Raise the Standard.

"It is intended to retain all the desirable features," says Director Dever, "and to work out a rounded program, with the weak spots strengthened, so that the people may get as much pleasure and benefit as possible for the $40,000 a year spent by the city for holiday celebrations. The Mayor is endeavoring to bring about improvements along this line, is acting in harmony with national tendencies in other cities, as well as in Boston, whereby the standard of holiday observance may be raised and given a new focus."

Time honored features will be retained, such as bell ringing, reading of the Declaration of Independence, the various band concerts and fireworks, but, resting on the charles, athletic meets on the common and so on according to Director Dever's plans. It is likely there will be another big water Carnival on the Charles and a parade in Roxbury by the Joseph Warren Association. New features will be especially arranged outings and picnics, and amusements in the parks and on the playgrounds.

Two new features will be a show of folk dancing and other children's entertainments on Castle Island, within the fort, and a repetition of the Pageant of Patriots at Franklin Park. It has been suggested that a New Citizens' dinner be held at which all men naturalized since last July 4 will be guests of the city.

Kennard's Real Love Is His Mother Didn't 'Soul Mate' With Miss Manniere

Boston Young Man Gives His Version About Broken Engagement.

NEW YORK, June 4.—The secret of the broken engagement of Reginald Perry Kennard and his Chicago sweetheart is out.

Kennard is a Boston boy. He is a brother of Vic Kennard, the famous Harvard half-back. He was engaged to Miss Wilhelmine Manniere, beautiful and rich. She went to Boston, looked things over and the delighted boy was broken.

"I don't want to carry a man tied to his mother's apron strings," the girl told her father.

"I'm in love with another," explained young Kennard at his apartments here today. "I am true to my first and really only sweetheart. There's her picture."

Kennard pointed to a framed portrait on the wall. It was the picture of his mother, taken several years ago.

Old Way Is Good Enough.

"I guess that she did find us rather puritanical at that when she visited Boston," said Kennard, laughing. "But then well, those are our ways—and I certainly don't intend to change them. Anyway, the truth is, I love another."

The young collegian denounced Miss Manniere's statement that he was tied to his mother's apron strings as absolutely foolish. He also denied the statement of William P. Manniere, father of the Chicago girl, who is a millionaire real estate operator, and who stated that Kennard was a "$10 a week dry goods clerk in New York."

Young Kennard was seen by a reporter at his apartment at No. 19 East Sixtieth street. Before making my statement he wished to have Manniere in his bedroom and look down a photograph of his mother. Then he said:

"Well, if they say that I'm tied to her apron strings, the best I can say is that she's a pretty good person to be tied to. The fact is that my mother had nothing to do with the breaking off the engagement. She allowed me full sway in the matter, not trying to influence me in either way."

A telegram from Chicago today quoted Miss Manniere's father as saying:

"Tied to Mother's Apron."

"Yes, it is true. My daughter has broken the engagement, but she and Mr. Kennard are still friends.

When she returned home from Boston she told me that Reginald was still 'tied to his mother's apron strings.' She said that she preferred to marry a man, and not a mother-in-law.

"Mr. Kennard and my daughter are not temperamentally nor personally, or financially mated. Mr. Kennard is a ten-dollar-a-week dry goods clerk in New York, and he receives no allowance from his mother."

The Chicago dispatch also said that Mr. Kennard and Miss Manniere met at a dinner at the Blackstone Hotel in that city a few months ago. It was in Chicago simplying the dry goods business with the firm from whose New York branch he is now connected with.

Miss Manniere and I became engaged while I was working in Chicago," young Kennard went on to say. "At that time it was unmercifully that we were to be kept five years, until by my own efforts I could support her free from any interference she might receive or from any money I might receive from my mother. I went to Boston to see her and to confer with her. She was East about ten days ago, and I went to see her and also my mother in Boston, and at that time we mutually agreed that it was better call the engagement off. We both came to the conclusion that we had made a mistake, and that we had both learned a lesson. Personally, at least, I can say there is absolutely no bitterness, and also no bitterness on the part of both of friends."

Mr. Manniere phoned me this afternoon from Boston, saying that she had read an interview given out by Wilhelmine's father in Chicago to the effect that I was handle her equal socially," he continued. "All I have to say in reply is that if he did give out this statement, or any other such sort of statement, it places his true status. It is really below the dignity of gentlemen to answer."

It is true that I am working here for a small salary, but it is far greater than $10 a week. In that respect, I am a Yankee and a true American. I believe in working and learning a business. My private income is simply sufficient to support me without working, and I don't care to live on it unnecessarily and make myself one of the idle rich. Her father never worked in his life, and believes it fosters the dignity of a gentleman to work, in that respect I differ with him.

"As to my being married as a mother-in-law. Well, you may get a worse one. That's the most considered manner in which I can reply to that."

Mr. Kennard's mother, Victoria, the former political power, was at home nursing a painful case of sciatica when her son made known his plans. It is claimed in no way that Miss Manniere had tearfully implored him to bring about a reconciliation and a correspondence ensuing that she begged Reginald Kennard $200,000 if he would remember and marry her at once. He said his heart had refused, as he was unwilling to "marry a catherdrals."

NEW HOPE FOR MRS. CUSUMANO

Walter H. Torrey, a prominent lawyer of Boston, representing members of the Daughters of the Revolution, has presented to Governor Foss a petition asking that the life of Mrs. Lena Cusumano be spared, on the ground that the Executive Council has expressed doubt as to the propriety of her execution by voting four to four, and that sending her to the chair under the circumstances would be a blot on the history of the State. Mr. Torrey practices in Plymouth county, where the courts said the woman's husband was slain by her and Enrico Massimi. Among the women signing the petition is Miss Floretta Vining.

It is expected Governor Foss will refer the petition to the Executive Council which meets tomorrow. The fate of Mrs. Cusumano will be settled at that session.

At the meeting of the Council last Wednesday eight members were present, Alexander McGregor being absent. Four Ayes was a tie. Mr. McGregor, before declaring his mind is open, has expressed himself as having great confidence in the laws of the State and the decisions of the courts. The friends of Mrs. Cusumano have not been able to find much hope in what he has said about the case.

Here is the petition:

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.
Office of Walter H. Torrey, Attorney-at-law, No. 1283 Commonwealth avenue, Boston, Mass.

To His Excellency, the Governor, Honorable Eugene N. Foss, and to the Council of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts: In the matter of commutation of the sentence of Lena Cusumano recently authorized and ordered, at present pending before your honorable body. Respectfully represent your petitioners:

That sitting as a court in this matter, you are not only bound to take judicial notice of such things as would the Supreme Court, but of such things affecting the interest of the Commonwealth.

His Excellency, the Governor, found sufficient cause and ordered and wisdom referred a petition for commutation to the council.

While it may be said that the life of Lena Cusumano hanging in the balance of a tie vote should be spared by a formal vote of the council, His Excellency, the Governor, not voting, his position naturally to be inferred to be favorable, in view of his reference of the original petition to the council and while it may further be said with fairness that a vote of the council four to four shows clearly such a measure of doubt in the mind of the whole as to establish the constitutional right of the petitioner to that doubt, your petitioners further represent that

WHEREAS, the council are so equally divided in the vote taken in this matter, that it becomes a matter of State,

A vote has been taken and resulted in a tie.

The defendant is a woman.

Massachusetts stands for all that is forgiving.

We believe one so unfortunate and unrelated should not be executed in this Commonwealth by so close a margin, especially when an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth will be given by her accomplice.

It is not in behalf of either that we petition.

It is that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in all her glory and in all her righteousness shall not be restrained.

More Time in Princess Race

PRINCESS FROM REVERE

Miss Genevrive Ross, contestant for American's prize.

Attention, Princess Contest candidates! So enthusiastic has the contest become and so ardent are the workers for ballots that the Contest Editor has decided to extend the contest time for a period of three weeks. Therefore, bear in mind this change in the schedule—instead of ending June 15, the contest will close on July 6.

There is a reason for this extension of the time in the contest. In letters to the Contest Editor candidates and their friends have asked for more time. They said that really the contest was so interesting it could not last longer. Secondly, they urged in their letters that many did not understand the full plan and details of the contest until it had been well under way.

A great many thought that all they had to do was to send in their photographs and a committee of judges would decide from an inspection of the pictures which were the prettiest and therefore the ones entitled to the prizes.

As the Contest Editor has explained again and again, this would be much the easier way to decide the winners, but—and this is a big "but"—it would be impossible to get any committee of judges to agree on any given type of beauty.

Knowing this, the AMERICAN planned that the decision as to the winners should be arrived at in exactly the same manner in which a popular contest is decided—by the public—by popular vote—a vote appearing in each edition of the AMERICAN. Each good for one (1) vote and one in each Sunday issue good for five (5) votes.

The opinions of the majority—as expressed by ballot votes—will rule.

It is apparent to the Contest Editor that all candidates NOW understand the plan fully and the only one being to do—for all concerned—is to give each candidate ample time to prove beyond question her popularity.

With the new closing date (July 7th) candidates all have just four (4) weeks from next Sunday to round up all of the votes to which they are really entitled.

It takes only time for one to get in touch with all of one's friends, relatives and acquaintances. And with the late closing date, there is now no good reason why the final results should not be the fullest expression of opinion on the part of the public.

Reference to the first published list of votes standing printed last Sunday will show at a glance that the battle of votes has really only just begun.

No candidate's position is secure for a minute without constant activity. Any of the names at the bottom of last Sunday's list are liable to be at the top next Sunday if the present leaders rest on their temporary laurels.

Have you given a "coupon party" yet? Invite all of your friends to a party at your home or even at some hall and get out tickets with the admission fee a certain number of coupons.)

Have you sent out postcards to everyone you know asking for their votes? They all read the AMERICAN. Are you going to let their votes go to some other candidate who has ambition enough to ask for them?

All of these things should be done—and at once!

The second list of vote standing will appear next Sunday. You have until next Friday morning at 11 a. m. to get your votes I nthe list, to get REAL busy!

One of the latest candidates in the fascinating contest is Miss Genevieve Tucker Ross, "the Silhouette Girl." Last Summer she was the favorite silhouette picture of Revere Beach and had the honor of making a silhouette of President Taft. Her friends have started in a whirlwind campaign to get the votes for the popular young girl.

Mothers' Congress to Meet in Boston

Executive Committee Decides on This City for Session in May Next Year.

The Executive Committee of the National Congress of Mothers, in meeting at Philadelphia, decided to hold the next national congress in this city on May 5, 1913.

The next international congress will be held in Washington, beginning April 22, 1914.

President Taft has instructed the State Department to issue invitations to foreign governments to send delegates to the child welfare conference which will be held at that time.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 300,000 more than its next highest competitor and 100,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

Would End the Use of Ether and Chloroform

Nitrous Oxide Harmless and Effective as Anaesthetic, Say Doctors at Atlantic City Convention.

ATLANTIC CITY, June 4.—Chloroform, ether and cocaine will soon pass out of general usage in the medical profession if the movement which was started at the sixty-third annual meeting of the American Medical Association here meets with the favor that was apparent as soon as the report of the committee on anaesthesia was read.

This committee is composed of such eminent surgeons as Dr. Yandell Henderson, of Connecticut; Dr. Thomas S. Cullen, of Baltimore; Dr. F. W. Huntington, of San Francisco; Dr. E. Isenegger-Matrin, of New Orleans, and Dr. Fred T. Murphy, of St. Louis.

In their report the use of chloroform is characterized as absolutely unjustifiable, and they cite numerous incidents where the patients have died after an operation. These deaths are now sacrificed, and were due solely to the fact that the surgeons did not realize how deeply the anaesthetic they were using really was.

They advocate the use of nitrous oxide or nitrous oxid-oxygen. The advantages of this element or combination of elements are many. There are no bad after effects. By the use of oxygen the impure carbon dioxide, which is emitted out of the lungs in health, is replaced. This process is perfectly natural, and it gives the nitrogen a chance to produce a natural anaesthesia.

SENATOR KENYON'S LEAD OVER 2 TO 1

DES MOINES, Ia., June 4.—Returns collected today from 520 precincts in the State, outside of Des Moines and Polk County, showed that United States Senator W. S. Kenyon of Fort Dodge, Progressive, received 37,000 votes and Lafayette Young of Des Moines, Conservative, approximately 18,000 votes in those precincts in yesterday's Iowa primaries.

The Governorship contest on the Republican ticket was extremely close. Although George W. Clarke held the edge in the returns at hand, campaign managers for F. G. Hodson declared they expected Hodson would be returned winner.

The Democratic vote throughout the State was the lightest that has been registered in a number of years. John T. Hamilton, on the face of incoming returns, led E. G. Dunn of Mason City for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

BARON BIEBERSTEIN DASHES THROUGH FIRE

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 4.—Baron Marschall von Bieberstein, the famous German Ambassador who has been transferred to London, made a dramatic exit from Constantinople through a wall of flame. The fire, which destroyed a large portion of Stamboul, surrounded the Ambassador's train. It was finally decided, however, to make a dash through the fire, and the train was driven straight through the flame area.

ELOPERS, 15, IN SECLUSION HERE

Somewhere in Boston today Milton Hahn, fifteen years old, and the school girl with whom he eloped from her Long Island home, fifteen-year-old Miss Paula Ostermann, are hiding, hiding all the efforts of their parents to locate them. The youthful couple left their homes in Woodhaven, L. I., several days ago and telegraphed from Boston that they were going to be married.

Though the Boston police have not as yet been requested to look for the pair of young sweethearts, it was expected that word would reach Pemberton square headquarters at any time, asking that a search for Hahn and Miss Ostermann be started. It was understood the girl's father had instructed friends in this city to look for his daughter.

School Sweethearts.

According to a news dispatch from Woodhaven, today, young Hahn's father is greatly angered at his son's conduct. It was said that the youthful bridegroom will probably have no little trouble explaining why when he went away, he took a tin box containing $700 and some valuable papers. By messenger, Milton sent back the paper and $200—also the box—but Mr. Hahn is far from being satisfied.

Milton and Paula were schoolmates in Public School No. 59, Woodhaven, and graduated together. Their childish love affair, which began in school, was continued afterward, and Paula's parents sent the girl to Berlin, where she spent the Summer with relatives.

When she came back she again met Milton.

Word from Boston.

On Memorial Day she received permission to attend a party. She told her parents that the celebration would last till late and that she would spend the night at her friend's home. Also, strangely, Milton suddenly had a desire to call on an uncle in Yonkers.

It was not until the following day, when Mr. Hahn received the box, that he began to suspect things. Then came a telegram, marked Boston, which read:

"Don't Mom and Pop. Paula and I are married. Don't worry. Milton."

DYNAMITE FOUR BUILDINGS IN NEW YORK GANG WAR

NEW YORK, June 4.—Four buildings were dynamited today in the gambling feud which broke out yesterday morning when "Jack" Zelig, an East Side gang leader, was shot. The bomb explosions were in lower Fourth avenue and St. Mark's place. All the buildings were damaged. Zelig, known to the police as an East Side fendist and dangerous gunfighter, lies in Bellevue hospital in a critical condition and may not recover. It is said Zelig's followers maintained gambling establishments in at least one of the buildings. Others of his friends lived in two others. The war was thought to be all over, when a bomb, but now the police believe gambling disputes led to the hostilities.

CHAUFFEUR QUITS JOB TO WED WHEN EMPLOYER OBJECTS

True love laughed at money and position in the case of Nathanial Fisher, a Newton chauffeur, who today will marry Miss Rhoda McQueen, a maid in the employment of the family for whom Fisher worked. The family objected to the couple marrying, but Fisher exercised his constitutional rights and resigned. They will be married today by the Rev. W. T. Beale of Dedham.

There will be no time wasted in honeymooning and drifting blissfully through rose-tinted paths, for immediately after taking unto himself a wife Fisher must go forth into the highways and byways and rustle up another job.

ISLE ROYALE AND TAMARACK WIN OVER G. M. HYAMS

HOUGHTON, Mich., June 4.—Judge Sessions, in United States District Court at Marquette, has denied the two petitions and dismissed both bills in the case of Godfrey M. Hyams of Boston against the Isle Royale and Tamarack companies, bringing to an end litigation which has held up plans of the Calumet & Hecla management for increased stamp mill efficiency. Judge Sessions' opinion was rendered immediately upon the completion of the final arguments in the case. The decision is an overwhelming victory for the Calumet & Hecla management. New mill plans will be carried out at once.

REPORT COTTON BILL IN HOUSE

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Declaring the report of the tariff board lacks information needed to revise the tariff, and pointing out the same "weaknesses" as existed in the report on the wool schedule, the Ways and Means Committee of the House today reported the cotton bill. This measure is identical with the bill passed last session and vetoed by President Taft. It provides a reduction of duties on all cotton products varying from 25 to 45 per cent.

The Democrats argue this measure should meet the approval of President Taft "despite the fact that he vetoed it at the last session." The majority members uphold the Underwood bill as "practical legislation" and attack the tariff board because of its failure to deal completely with any phase of the proposed reduction.

The report especially calls attention to the refusal of the board to give the names of English cotton mills from which the tariff experts obtained the information that wages are higher in this country than in the United Kingdom. Minority members of the committee also filed their substitute bill, prepared by Representative Hill of Connecticut. It follows conclusions of the tariff board. The rates in this bill are slightly higher than in the Underwood bill, being based on protection instead of "revenue only."

The majority report says:

"The only change which has occurred in the situation since last Summer is the submission of the tariff board report on cotton manufactures, which was submitted to Congress by the President in his message of March 26, 1912. In his message the President said: 'I now recommend that the Congress proceed to a consideration of this schedule with a view to its revision and a reduction in its rates.'

"The executive, therefore, now is in harmony with the majority members of this House on the general policy to be adopted in spite of his veto of last Summer, and the only question remaining is to what extent the reduction in cotton duties shall be carried.

"It was pointed out in the previous House report that the tariff board report on wool was not in reality a tariff document. This comment is applicable to the report on cotton manufactures, although the latter contains much more material than the former concerning rates of duty and the method by which they are to be levied.

"However, nowhere in the report is any recommendation as to the proper course to be pursued in adjusting the tariff, the reader being left to draw his own conclusion from the data presented. As in the report on wool, the board has nothing to say respecting the duties as affecting capital or labor, the profits of manufacturing concerns engaged in the industry and practically nothing relative to the general influence of the tariff on the status of the industry.

"The essence of argument of defenders of excessive protective duties has been that the profits of middlemen were largely dependent on tariff, but were the outcome of trade agreements.

"If the tariff board be correct in its statements with reference to the charges made by mills for the clothes they supply to jobbers, a reduction of duty would in fact affect the amount obtained by the producer to a least, but would operate to reduce the charges of transferring goods from producer to consumer."

Deny American Girl Cremation in Paris

PARIS, June 4.—The body of Miss Margaret Cravens of Madison, Ind., a member of one of the wealthiest and best known families of Southern Indiana, who committed suicide by shooting herself through the heart, cannot be cremated here. The young woman, a music student, left a long letter addressed to a friend asking that her body be cremated, but the authorities have pointed out that the French law forbids the cremation of suicides.

Friends of Miss Cravens say she had no love affair and no worry over money, but was simply dissatisfied with what she regarded as the emptiness of life. She was not a regular music student.

The fact that her father committed suicide indicated an inherited weakness in the nervous system. Miss Cravens' friends say, always justified her father's act even to the extent of idealizing it.

BUYS EMPEROR'S WINE FOR A SONG

LONDON, June 4.—The taster of a well-known firm of wine merchants, Hodges & Butler, recently purchased at auction fifteen dozen of "Moselle" at ten shillings a dozen. It has been found that it was royal Tokay, worth 1½ guineas a bottle. The wine originally was a gift of the Emperor of Austria to an English nobleman and was wrongly classified at the sale.

Hot weather and love walk hand in hand if the records at the City Registrar's office are to be believed, for with the rise of the mercury the number of applications for marriage licenses hit a very high mark, ninety. Tala broke all records. The greatest number of any previous day was eighty-five. That number filed applications on the first Monday of June a year ago.

All day there was a rush on at the offices of the registry of marriage licenses on the second floor of the temporary City Hall annex at No. 100 Summer street. Throughout the day there were many blushing young couples who called at City Hall seeking the necessary application blanks, only to be referred to the temporary City Hall annex on Summer street by Patrolman McHugh, the police guard on the second floor of City Hall.

FOSS TO BUILD BIG APARTMENT HOUSE

The largest apartment house in New England, to stand on Brookline avenue facing the Back Bay Park, is to be built by Governor Foss, according to plans now under way.

As the Governor has outlined his plans to his architect he is to construct a building containing 1,000 apartments, a theatre, a garage and a restaurant.

The big hotel will be built on the corner commanding both the Riverdale Park and the Back Bay Fens. He has purchased 116,000 feet of land on Brookline avenue facing the Back Bay park and this with an adjoining 78,000 feet already owned by him, gives the control of the corner on the northerly side of Audubon road and the westerly side of Brookline avenue.

Duchess of Connaught Reported Seriously Ill

OTTAWA, Ont., June 4.—Reports reached here today from Quebec that the Duchess of Connaught, wife of the Governor-General, is seriously ill. Appendicitis is threatened. The royal party, which went to Quebec to spend a fortnight in the ancient Canadian capital, was accompanied by Captain Worthington, who is a physician in regular attendance upon the Duke, but Dr. Garrow, a Montreal specialist, has been summoned to Quebec.

It is reported that Sir James Grant of Ottawa, one of the best-known physicians in the Dominion, has been consulted by telegraph. The ducal party consists of the Duke, the Duchess, Princess Patricia and a number of attendants.

Mrs. Keating will visit the police commissioner and describe the treatment accorded her during the few minutes following her visit to the box.

Patrolman Nutting, the officer who is accused by Mrs. Keating, denies her story. He says he thought somebody had rung in a false alarm and questioned the woman about it.

BRIEF REST FOR HARVARD "COUNT" IN PRISON CELL

Harvard's "count" has departed. Not exactly for paris unknown, but at least where he can find quiet and seclusion for a short rest.

About two weeks ago the "count" arrived at Cambridge and let it be known to some of the college seniors that he was Fritz Tawler, the son of an Austrian nobleman, who owned a large cotton business in the homeland.

As usual in such cases, he was out of funds, but of course expected a check from home at any moment. He struck the right road across the Charles and the students claimed him for their own.

Judge Stobe fixed his "highness" three dollars for his escapade, but, the check not having arrived, the prisoner could not pay. So for the next eight days he will have a chance to repose in the East Cambridge Jail.

FALLS DEAD FROM STREET CLEANER

Lawrence Sullivan, forty-eight years old and employed in the Public Works Department as driver for a street cleaner, fell from his seat early today at Boylston and Arlington streets, and was dead when picked up. Heart disease is believed to have caused his death. The body is at the North Grove street morgue. Sullivan resided at No. 46 Fox street, South End.

FIREBUG IN NORTH END REAPPEARS; FIFTY IN PERIL IN TENEMENT BLAZE

The firebug who has terrorized the North End for months and defied detection by the police, early today imperilled fifty lives by setting fire to a pile of excelsior in the basement of the tenement at No. 41 Salutation street.

The fire was discovered by a man passing on a bicycle. He met Patrolman Joseph Ferrari, who rang in an alarm from fire 14. The blaze was extinguished after a brisk fight. Smoke drove all the ten families in the four-story brick building to the street.

District Chief Grady, conducting an investigation, found where a pile of excelsior had been placed against the cellar wall and ignited. The fire started at about 3:15. A peculiar feature of the incendiary fires of the North End during the past few months is that all have started a little after six in the morning.

M'GRATH REPRESENTS HUB AT CONVENTION

The Recreation Congress is the sixth annual meeting of the Playground and Recreation Association of America, of which Joseph Lee of Boston is president. The sessions begin Wednesday, June 5, and end Saturday.

MORE ABOUT NEW TONIC, TONA VITA

John H. Fleming Is One of Many Helped

The following statement is by John H. Fleming, and is similar in character to many now being made at various Boston drug stores by those who have tried the new tonic, Tona Vita.

Mr. Fleming, who lives at 6 Devens Street, said: "This Tona Vita is the best medicine I have taken. Its action in my case was simply wonderful.

"I think I was one of the most downhearted men in Boston before I began taking this tonic. I lacked strength and even little bit of work seemed like a big job to me, and I was as nervous as I could be. Any sudden noise would startle me so that I would jump, and my nerves would not quiet down for several minutes. I never got a sound night's sleep, but would toss about in bed all night. When I sat down to a meal I did so more as a habit, for nothing I ate was enjoyed. Sometimes the very thought of eating would make me sick.

"A short time ago I made up my mind I had nervous debility and decided to try the tonic, Tona Vita. I did so and can truthfully say that it is the best thing that could have happened to me. My ambition has returned and my health is so much better as to be noticed by my friends. I now sleep all night and feel refreshed and ready for work in the morning. I enjoy my meals and am able to digest them as I have not done for a long time."

Any man or woman in Boston who is a victim of nervous debility is making a grave mistake if they do not try this tonic. The symptoms of nervous debility are often mistaken for something else—stomach trouble, as a rule—but there is no mistaking debility for anything else by those who understand it.

The following symptoms are characteristic of this trouble—lassitude, timidity, depression of spirits, little vitality, poor circulation, headaches, indigestion, weak back and dull pains at the base of the spine. These are all unmistakable symptoms of nervous debility, and there are thousands of people, especially in the larger cities, who are afflicted. Tona Vita can be purchased at all leading drug stores in Boston. It is unquestionably the greatest tonic ever before sold to the public.

ATTRACTIONS AT BOSTON PLAYHOUSES

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

The exclusive two-dollar drama of the regular season becomes a popular priced producer in June, from which you may infer that "The Typhoon," which found its way to the Majestic Theatre yesterday, at prevailing Summer prices, will doubtless be served as a two-dollar dramatic dish next October. All of which is not to the point, except in the small detail of Lindsay Morison's activity in landing "The Typhoon" in Boston about three months ahead of the established schedule.

"The Typhoon" is another of those "The Devil" affairs, which bloom rarely and peacefully in Hungary, but which stir up discord when transplanted on this continent, where copyright laws are about as effective as the statutes regulating the trusts. That is why Mr. Morison was enabled to present "The Typhoon" yesterday, notwithstanding threats and other promises calculated to worry his peace of mind. Inasmuch as Mr. Morison's version was not the same as that used by Walker Whiteside in New York he kept himself on safe territory.

While "The Typhoon," as a play, is better than a great many of the season's output, its claim to popularity arises principally from its unusual and rather bold theme. It is a study of the modern Japanese character, and shows the little brown man as a distinct peril to Western civilization. In that respect it is entertaining. It is adroitly written and most of us are willing to take the author's word for everything that happens. Mr. Whiteside's production in New York this Spring was one of the late season's most pronounced successes.

You might reasonably expect that a stock company would meet unusual difficulties in plunging into a play of this kind, for ten of the masculine characters are Japanese. That Mr. Morison's players handled themselves so agreeably was a matter of wonder.

The central figure, Dr. Tokeramo, is a Japanese secret agent in Berlin, where he is engaged in gathering facts for his home government. Around him are other Japanese agents on similar missions. Tokeramo becomes involved in an affair with a young woman of Berlin who uses him rather shabbily, and in return he chokes her to death. It is all done very nicely and quietly.

To save Tokeramo for the important work he is doing for Japan, his companions trick the police by offering an innocent youth as the murderer. This young man, ought to serve his Mikado, readily assents, and plays his role like a hero. Tokeramo completes his labor, but remorse sets in and he dies of a broken heart—or its Japanese equivalent.

The author attempts to show that every male Japanese is simply an instrument in the progress of his nation—that the glory of the Mikado is paramount to every personal consideration.

Mr. Hassell, who has done many things well in his long service in stock, gave Tokeramo a touch of Eastern atmosphere that fitted nicely into Japanese coloring of the play. His performance was creditable in every way. Miss Cleveland made Helena Kerner a woman of light heart and frivolous morals, with an inclination to excessive emotion. She played without effort. Others who helped keep the Hassell company were Edward Nannery, James Harper and Wyllis Birch, as Japanese agents, and James A. Bliss and Dudley Hawley, as German officers. Mr. Hawley was more than convincing as a wine loving author looking for a sweetheart that also served in the same capacity for Tokeramo.

It was not on the program, but the audience had evening extracted as much amusement from the French poodle that was passed over the footlights in a big basket of flowers for Rose Morison, as it did from any of the stirring incidents of the play.

"The Typhoon," however, is sufficiently unusual to attract attention on its own account.

NERVOUS DYSPEPSIA

A Form of Stomach Trouble That Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Are Especially Adapted to Correct.

Mrs. James A. Fletcher, of No. 115 Beech avenue, Macon, Ga., says: "I recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People because they restored me to health after suffering five long months with nervous indigestion. While in St. Louis in 1903 I became a nervous wreck caused by what the doctors there called nervous indigestion. I had a peculiar pain in the top of my head that never left me for a single hour and at times I was almost distracted by the pain. My heart would palpitate so that I would sit up in bed for hours with my hand on it. It seemed some nights that I could not live until morning. I suffered from choking sensations and at times it was impossible for my speech. The pain between my shoulders and in my side was intense. I could not digest anything I ate and lived for months on milk, lime water and eggs, and after eating even these I would be in misery and it seemed that I could belch gas for an hour at a time. After taking everything I ever heard of and being treated by a good doctor without relief, I decided to consult a specialist in St. Louis. It seemed that I got worse instead of better after following his directions for two months. I was almost prostrated for want of food as he said starving myself was my only chance. I had commenced to despair, when one morning while waiting for my husband to eat his breakfast and envying him every mouthful, I noticed a testimonial of a cure by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in the paper. I read every word of it and as the case was similar to mine, I decided to try them. With the third box my digestion improved, the palpitation stopped and the pain in my head left. In a month's time I began to eat without distress. I regained my weight and strength and felt like a new person. I have been a well woman ever since."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were originally a prescription used in the doctor's private practice and their benefit to mankind has been increased many thousand fold by their being placed on general sale with the doctor's own directions for use. They contain no opiates or other habit-forming drugs.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

ANDRE MAQUARRE NEW CONDUCTOR AT POP CONCERT

Andre Maquarre assumed the conductorship of the Pops last night and found a large audience ready to greet him. The reading of Maquarre at the beginning of the second month of the Pops always means that French music will figure more largely in the programs.

Now that Gustav Strauss discriminates against the waltz, the gallic composers frequently performe them, but he usually confines himself to the more familiar French works. Maquarre can be counted upon to uncover a number of the more effective works of the modern French school in the course of the season.

The novelty of last night's program was a suite by Christian Kriens, "In Holland." The movements were entitled "Morning at Sea," "The Potter's Mill," "Creeping Sounds," and "Wooden Shoe Dance."

It is a pretty little work, of no great depth and no more effectually descriptive than such things usually are, but it tickled the ear.

Gounod's seldom heard "Mireille" Overture, and Gaune's stirring march, "Les Petit Mateiots" were also heard.

Maquarre's own waltz "Endymion," was given a brilliant performance. This is a composition in the best waltz manner, full of bright melodies and vivid rhythms. Chevalier's Spanish rhapsody and Wald teufel's string sextette were little known numbers that pleased.

TRIXIE FRIGANZA THE HEAD LINER AT KEITH'S THEATRE

The hot weather is here, and Keith's has provided a bill that is cool and refreshing as a drink of ice water. There is not a thing in the entire program, not a moment when the audience is expected to do anything but laugh.

Among those present is our old friend Trixie Friganza. Miss Friganza has a lot of new songs which she accompanies by nifty dances. Dancing, with Trixie, is some accomplishment, because her little tootsies are supporting a whole lot more adipose tissue than they used to.

However, she bounced around right merrily and sang character songs to the people's taste.

Harry Brown, down on the bill as that crazy chap, answered the specifications. He talks faster than a dollar sewing circle and specializes in limericks. This one lingered.

There was a young son of a breeze
Sure a girl that he thought that he knew her.
He lifted his hat;
She gave him a rap,
And knocked him down into the sewer.

Beautiful little thing. There were many such.

Dorothy Rogers and company appeared in a sketch called "Babies a la Carte." If a regular dramatic critic went to see it he would probably treat Dorothy, and her company and the playlet, and the scenery, and the props, left the audiences rather horrible at the matinee. When he appeared there in the bill, headed by the Texas Tommy Dancers, appearing for the first time.

Bates and Leighton, two clever girls with the show, made a big hit, beginning their singing down in the audience and finishing it on the stage. Rolfe's Band also received a great hand.

Boswell, Roland, Cole and Denehy are the nimble four in the dance and they, with Bernice Tupper, in new dances, were heartily applauded. Mr. B. A. Rolfe's cornet solo received a great reception.

Norumbega Park.

As the temperature begins to climb Norumbega Park assumes new beauties, which never fail to attract the seeker for Summer amusement. This week's bill in the open air theatre is fully up to the standard set by Norumbega. The two performances yesterday were played to full houses.

Orpheum Theatre.

The bit of the new bill at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday was "A Night on the Roof," a musical comedy with seventeen people, including Lucy Daly and Tom Doniay. It proved one of the most pretentious vaudeville offerings of the season. There were a dozen other lively acts on the program.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

Violet Masoette's "Merry Maidens" was a real treat for the patrons of the Bowdoin yesterday. The musical selections, the costumes and the lively manner in which the girls went about their work made the show worth while.

Globe Theatre.

A vaudeville patron who could not find plenty of enjoyment at the Globe yesterday would be hard to suit. The Harmony Four, a quartet of young men with good voices; The Flying Henrys, in aerial stunts that were "hair raising;" and Irving Jones, with his "coonisms," made up the important part of the vaudeville end of the program. The Rays, the Song Revue and the Pathe Weekly were cordially received and the new films were entertaining.

Scenic Temple.

New vaudeville motion pictures and a concert by Kriens, Howe's Orchestra made up the bill at the Scenic Temple yesterday.

Plays That Remain.

"Hanky Panky" began the final week of its stay at the Shubert Theatre last evening.

"The Spring Maid" is now on its final week at the Tremont Theatre.

"Miss Jimmy Valentine" will remain at the Castle Square through this week.

The Rainey African Hunt Pictures continue at the Park Theatre.

The Dunbar in kinematicolor began a new week at the Tremont Temple yesterday.

Amusement Notes.

"Little Miss Fix-It," with Alice Lloyd, will come to the Tremont for an extended engagement next week.

The show at the old Howard yesterday was a benefit tendered by the management of the house to the employes. It was a success.

Hub Theatre.

ALBANIAN REBELS BUTCHER TURKS

SALONIKA, European Turkey, June 4.—A fresh revolt against Turkish rule in the Balkans has broken out and fighting is reported from Northern Albania. In a fierce battle at Ipek today, 4,000 Albanian insurgents engaged an equal number of Turkish troops. The insurgents were victorious for a time and seized a number of military outposts, putting the Turkish defenders to the sword. Hundreds were killed and wounded on both sides. Turkish reinforcements were rushed to the front and the insurgents finally driven off.

VISCOUNTESS D'AZY "DAISY" TO FRIENDS

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Viscountess D'Azy, wife of the naval attache of the French embassy, has startled the diplomatic corps with the announcement that hereafter her friends must call her Daisy while her clever diplomatist husband is to be Mr. Ben. This Americanization of the names D'Azy and Benoist is creating great amusement in the smart set.

BERT FITZGIBBON SERVES BEANS TO THEATRE AUDIENCE

Going right into the audience and serving Boston baked beans made Bert Fitzgibbon one of the most popular performers at the new National Theatre Gardens. When he appeared there in the bill, headed by the Texas Tommy Dancers, appearing for the first time.

Bates and Leighton, two clever girls with the show, made a big hit, beginning their singing down in the audience and finishing it on the stage. Rolfe's Band also received a great hand.

CAST OF FOUR IN "THE CLIMAX" AT CASTLE SQUARE

With John Craig and Mary Young, and most of their company in Chicago rehearsing for their presentation of the Radcliffe Prize Play, "The End of the Bridge," an experiment was tried at the Castle Square yesterday afternoon and last night, in the presentation of Edward Locke's play, "The Climax." It was a success. There are only four characters in the play. The cast last night consisted of Donald Meek, Carney Christie, Thomas F. Fallon and Florence Webber, and the four made a hit.

The story of "The Climax" is delightful in its simplicity. Adelina von Hegen, a girl from an Ohio village, with a voice and operatic ambitions, lives in the home of her teacher, Luigi Golfanti—played by Donald Meek. His son Pietro, an impetuous young chap, becomes infatuated with the girl. John Raymond, a doctor, also joins the race, and between them they make a lively time of it.

Raymond doesn't like to think of a professional career for the girl. He has a certain aptitude for hypnotic suggestion and plans to reverse the Trilby idea by spoiling her voice.

He fails—the girl succeeds, and all ends happily.

Miss Webber was delightful as the girl with the voice. Her own particular voice is a soprano of pleasing quality and she sang gracefully and with a proper amount of sentiment when it became necessary. With the exception of Mr. Meek, those in the cast made the same as in the original production and played their parts smoothly, while the latter added his familiar touches to the whole.

MRS. WILCOX GUEST OF AMERICANISTS

LONDON, June 4.—There was an American dinner at the Lyceum Club in honor of the delegates to the International Congress of Americanists. Mrs. T. P. O'Connor presided. The guests included the members of the American Embassy, Secretary Phillips and Mr. Squier, Consul-General Griffiths, Ellis Wheeler Wilcox, Zoilo Nutile, M. H. Saville and many other Americans.

ROCKEFELLER ACTIVE IN SCHOOL FIGHT

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., June 4.—Papers have been served at Albany on the State superintendent of education in an attempt to oppose Thomas L. Bryant, a Pocantico Hills farmer, who at the last election beat Mrs. David M. Milton, John D. Rockefeller's candidate for school trustee. Suit has been expected, as the opinion prevailed that Mr. Rockefeller regarded his control of the School Board endangered by the success of Bryant.

NEW AUTO TRAPS SHUBERTS TO WORRY DRIVERS

By J. C. KERRISON.

The establishment of several traps in and around Boston is causing the motorists some little inconvenience and trouble.

A trap has been established at Charlesgate, West, and Beacon street, a somewhat dangerous place and one which it behooves all motorists to drive with caution.

In the Jamaica Plain district a trap is working in connection with the park system from Boston to Forest Hills at the intersection of the road which enters the Arboretum.

In order to avoid trouble it will be necessary to slow down and give a signal before passing the intersecting street.

The well-known trap at Hingham is again in operation and it would seem as though this trap is so well known as to cause all who travel in that direction to do so with caution.

The Automobile Legal Association has received a very courteous letter from John H. Hiller, chief of police of Groton, stating that unless motorists stop overspeeding through that town it will be necessary to institute traps.

The police in that town have been considerate in their treatment of motorists in the past and the association asks its members to do everything within their power to comply with the law and request their friends to do likewise.

Swampscott is again busy with traps. The one which has been operated at the junction of New Ocean street, Burrows street and Paradise road is again in operation and if one proceeds along this rather dangerous junction carefully they will have no cause for complaint.

This particular location is perhaps one of the most dangerous on the North Shore, it making a diagonal turn from one street to another and into the State road.

In making this turn from either direction it is advisable to keep to the right of the police officer who stands in the middle of the road.

While this is what might be termed a trap is an open one and no considerate person can object to its establishment.

The 1913 six-cylinder Packard has arrived by express from Detroit and attracted a large number of visitors to its quarters on Commonwealth avenue.

The car is a beauty in every respect, and, true to the high standard always maintained by the Packard Company.

Several changes have been made in the 1912 model and a self-starting device with electric lights has been added to the 1913 product. The wheel base has been slightly increased, giving greater foot room in the tonneau, while both front and rear seats have been made somewhat more roomy.

The body is finished in black and all metal parts are enamel and nickel finished. The gasoline tank has been placed in the rear and the front springs are semi-elliptic and three-quarters semi-elliptic in rear.

In the 1913 Packard, in matters of refinements alone, the predominating desire evidently has been to secure easier riding, more luxury and more comfort, the question of efficiency having already been covered by the well-known builders.

The 1913 Packard is a car of which any one may well be proud and its ability is beyond question.

Hereafter, the Packard will be made in touring, runabout and enclosed bodies only. With the finish of the car now on hand is black, the company does not, by any means, confine itself to this standard of finish.

Arthur J. Wicks is delighted with the manner in which the car was greeted by its friends in this town during its first day here.

Arthur J. Wicks, formerly with the Studebaker Corporation, is now associated with the selling force of the R. C. H. Corporation.

USED MIRROR TO SHOOT HIMSELF

WINDHAM, N. H., June 4.—The body of an unknown man, who had apparently committed suicide by shooting, was found in the pasture of Arthur Nesmith by Olor J. Cochrane, who was walking across the land. He had hung his long black overcoat on a tree, and then had evidently used a pocket mirror to see how to shoot. The mirror and a revolver were found beside him.

NAZARETH ACADEMY SUPERIOR PRAISES FATHER JOHN'S MEDICINE

In a recent letter the Mother Superior of Nazareth Academy, says: "I have nothing except praise for Father John's Medicine. Several of the sisters have been taking it and all have been benefited by it. (Signed) Mother Antonette, Nazareth Academy, Concordia, Kansas.

It is worth while knowing that Father John's Medicine is a safe medicine to take as a tonic and body builder, because it does not contain any alcohol or dangerous drugs, but is composed entirely of pure cod liver oil, combining food elements, thus building new flesh and strength. Children, as well as older people find renewed health and strength from its use.

NEWPORT, June 4.—Mrs. Sarah Weed Cosgrove, called the prettiest girl in Newport, got a divorce today in the Superior Divorce Court from William J. Cosgrove of East Boston. Hereafter she will be known as Miss Sarah Weed.

According to a declaration made in the court today, Cosgrove, who did not contest the case, is working in a restaurant at No. 4 Saratoga street, East Boston. His wife declared he had neglected to provide for her and stated she had been forced to support herself.

The couple were married here on April 20, 1908, following an ardent courtship by Cosgrove. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. William A. Doran, pastor of St. Joseph's Church.

Strange Letter Figures in Shaw Case

Prisoner Comforted by Daughter

MRS. STUART, CO-DEFENDANT WITH SHAW, AND HER DEVOTED SISTER.

Mrs. Georgia M. Stuart (at right) and Mrs. J. H. Courtney, sketched by William Stevens.

Receiver Says Defendant Has Returned Money Alleged to Have Been Stolen.

Miss Carrie Shaw, daughter of Arthur Wills Shaw on trial with Mrs. Georgia M. Stuart for the alleged larceny of $19,000 from the A. W. Shaw Shoe Company of Freeport, Me., is the only member of the Shaw family attending the court proceedings, which were resumed today before Judge Crosby in the Superior Criminal Court.

The scandal affected the family terribly, so much so that Mrs. Shaw and the two other daughters could not face the humiliation of attending the trial, but Carrie came to Boston with her accused father to comfort him and keep him company.

She is his favorite daughter and worked at the shoe factory in Maine as his confidential clerk. When her father fled to California she was ill from appendicitis, having undergone an operation the day before he disappeared.

Miss Shaw is a tall, refined appearing girl with blonde hair. The sacrifice she is making in daily appearing in court for her father's sake is only too apparent to the spectators. A woman friend has to keep fanning her constantly. She has had to leave the courtroom in a fainting condition on a few occasions.

J. W. Amick, Mr. Shaw's partner in the shoe business, testified that he and Shaw got $4,000 a year as salary. When he latter called himself a "son of a gun" and wrote that he liked water so well he would not kill by drowning himself in mid-ocean. Mr. Amick testified that he didn't think his partner would commit suicide.

Mr. Amick made an investigation on his own account, consulted Attorney Wheeler of Lewiston, who is the receiver in Maine, and reported the matter to the police.

Shaw has returned to the receiver of the company, Charles G. Bancroft, the money which he is alleged to have stolen, and $4,000 or $5,000 besides.

This statement was made by Attorney Bancroft himself, as a witness at the trial.

Another startling bit of evidence was a letter introduced which Shaw wrote to his partner, J. W. Amick, from Los Angeles. In this letter Shaw persists in his strange statement that for sixty days he did not know his own movements and returned to his senses to find himself in California. In the letter, also, Shaw urges Amick to tell the plain truth at the trial.

WOMAN SAVES TWO CHILDREN AT FIRE

Two children were rescued today by Miss Lena Maloney, a servant employed by William M. Wood, president of the American Woolen Company, in a fire in the stable at the rear of the Wood home at No. 351 Newbury street, in the Back Bay.

The children were in a hay loft in the stable. It was said that this loft was occupied by a family during the Winter. The family is in the employ of the Woods.

The children's parents are Mr. and Mrs. John McTighue. He is employed as coachman by Mr. Wood. They have four children, the other two were at school.

Shortly before noon the youngsters were playing in the hay. One of them noticed smoke and fire in the centre of a pile of hay. They both ran to the front of the building and shouted. Miss Maloney heard their cries and rushed up stairs and carried the children to the street.

Girl Won By Bravery of Grahame-White

LONDON, June 4.—Miss Dorothy Taylor of New York and Claude Grahame-White, the English aviator, will be married at Wilford, Essex, on June 27 next, it is announced. Miss Taylor met Grahame-White when they were crossing the Atlantic.

"I was attracted to him from the first," she has told her intimates. "He is tremendously clever, and, to me, that is the first requirement in a man. I do not care what a man looks like or who he is so long as he is clever.

"Besides," Miss Taylor continued, "Mr. White has taken great risks and done many daring things. Any girl might be flattered to have an offer of marriage from such a brave and brainy man."

The couple will live here.

Miss Taylor is a granddaughter of the late Governor Boswell P. Flower of New York. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Taylor, live at No. 784 Fifth avenue, New York.

Clinton Strikers Beat Supposed Detective

CLINTON, June 4.—A man, who was denounced as a detective, was beaten severely by striking mill operatives here today during a meeting of 200 of the strikers on a vacant lot off Chase street. As he fled through the crowd he was kicked and cuffed unmercifully. By the time the police reserves arrived the crowd had dispersed.

The attack on the supposed sleuth was the only show of violence today, though the police maintained a close watch of all the movements of the strikers and I. W. W. leaders, as a result of the shooting in which seven were injured yesterday.

According to claims of the strikers committee, 2,000 workers in the Bigelow Carpet Mills and 900 operatives in the Clinton Wire Works will go out on sympathetic strike within a few hours. This is denied by the mill superintendents.

MOSES H. MERCHANT, secretary of the Omaha Grain Exchange, is dead at his apartments in the Hotel Cheshire, Brookline. For forty-three years he was the traffic agent of the Northeastern Railroad. A widow and a young child survive him.

RIGHT REV. JOHN SHEEPSHANKS, formerly Bishop of Norwich, is dead at his home in Ludlow. He was a noted writer.

J. EDWIN JONES, one of Jamaica Plain's oldest residents, is dead at his home at 3 Bickford street. He was superintendent of streets during the administration of Mayor Thomas N. Hart. He was a Mason and a former vice-president of the Old Men's Club.

MRS. MARY ELIZABETH RICHARDSON, widow of John A. Richardson, judge of the Supreme Court of Missouri, is dead in Riverview from heart failure. She was eighty-four years old.

CHARLES R. HAINES, for many years president of the Nantasket Beach Steamship Company, is dead at his home in Hingham.

E. H. HUBBARD, just renominated for his fifth term from the Eleventh Iowa Congressional district, died suddenly of heart failure at Sioux City, aged 63.

WOMAN REPORTS JEWELRY STOLEN

Caroline Jordon of No. 42 Washington court, Cambridge, reported to the police on Monday that in the last month, while she was away, a case containing rings, pendants and other jewelry was stolen from her apartment. The jewelry is valued at $500.

TEACHERS SEEK PAY INCREASE

The School Committee is today considering a petition which has been submitted to them by the members of the Boston High School Assistants' Association, who are seeking an increase in salary to meet the high cost of living.

Accompanying the petition was a comparative schedule of the salaries paid to teachers in other cities of the United States, which shows that the female teachers of this city receive the second lowest pay.

This petition, which has been signed by President Mary I. Adams, Secretary Mildred D. Bentley and Mary Hibbard, Bertha Vogel and Laura B. Richardson of the executive committee, states that the salaries of the teachers in the public schools should not be based on rank. The petition goes on to say that in cities where the cost of living is much lower than it is in this city, it is necessary to pay its teachers higher salaries than those paid in Boston nevertheless.

Ten new high school masters have been appointed to take their places, assigned to the English High School, the High School of Commerce and one to the East Boston High School.

Miss Susan E. Gifford, who has been a school teacher for thirty-six years, has been retired on a pension of $344 a year.

Missing Maine Girl May Have Eloped

BANGOR, June 4.—The seance of a clairvoyant and the discovery that there is a mysterious youth, believed to be a college student, in the case, led the police today to believe that pretty Helen Haley, who disappeared Wednesday, had eloped, although she was to be married to a well-known young Bangor business man, who is now in the search for her. The police officials declared today as a result of their search that they were convinced the young girl had not been murdered or committed suicide.

The new and romantic turn taken in the case is due to the statements had today to the police by Mrs. Charles Snow, wife of a citizen of Hermon, and of friends of the missing girl, who had been consulting clairvoyants and fortune tellers in this city to see if they could learn the whereabouts of Miss Haley.

The police were surprised to learn that there was another man in the case. Miss Haley was engaged to Arad Long.

RILEY'S COLUMN

AN old man walked out of the Walpole street grounds yesterday happy, with the glisten of youth in his eyes. He had been going to baseball games for years, waiting to see how a play was made that he saw back in the 90's, and hadn't seen since. He wanted to see how it was done. He had seen. He was satisfied.

* * *

IT was "inside baseball." It was a play that illustrated why the Giants and the Cubs are always at or near the top of the National League percentage column, and why the Athletics are always at or near the top of the American League column, while some of the others are always at or near the bottom.

* * *

IT happened in the sixth inning. The Cubs had the game, 3 to 0, at that stage of the proceedings. They had hit Otto Hess safely six times in the first three innings, but Otto, under Kling's new rule of "stick and take your medicine," had stuck and they had not hit him safely since the third scramble. Our old friend, Mordecai Brown, was pitching for the Cubs and the Pilgrims had been able to dig up but three safe ones.

* * *

SINCE the Cubs could not score any runs, it was their mission to prevent the Pilgrims from scoring any. Hess hit safely to centre and McDonald walked. Campbell lifted a high one back of shortstop and Sheckard ran in for it. It was a sure out, caught on the fly, but Sheckard put some intelligence into the play. He took the ball on a short bound—trapped it—and then tossed it to Evers, who was at second base watching for just such a play.

* * *

EVERS put his foot on the bag and, was not forced off because McDonald, being forced out, Hess had a right to occupy second base. If Evers had touched Hess first, he would have been out because he would have been forced off; then Evers could have touched the bag, retiring McDonald, who had been forced off first.

* * *

THIS was the way Johnny Kling saw the play and he objected so strenuously that he was ordered off the field. It is probable that Owen, behind the plate, took the intention from the deed, and gave Hess the benefit, and the ball were on second base almost simultaneously, he took the intention for the deed and gave Evers a double put-out on the double play. It was a batter's breath decision in any case, and it is likely that Owen and Brennan decided on general principles, giving Sheckard and Evers the credit for their quick intelligence.

* * *

THE Pilgrims found Mordecai Brown's weakness in the next inning. Miller and Jackson singled and Hauser, after lifting a foul over the right field fence, placed a home run close to it, tying the score. The Bostonians made five hits in the inning, and "three-fingered" Brown gave way for Lavender, lately of Providence, who kept the Pilgrims runless for the rest of the game. The Cubs squeezed through a run in the ninth. "Doc" Miller lost the bound of Sheckard's single in the sun, giving him two bases, he went to third on Schulte's sacrifice and scored on Tinker's out at first.

* * *

ANOTHER dispute play occurred in the seventh. Miller, on first, thought that Jackson's hit to right would be caught and slowed up moving to second. Schulte legged to Evers, but the throw was wild and "Doc" hastened for third, which was unoccupied. Sheckard recovered the ball and hurled it back at Evers when he saw Jackson legging it for second. "Hickory" collided with Evers, spilling the ball. Evers protested that the collision was deliberate, pointing to the torn knee of his trousers as evidence that "Hickory" ran out of his way. The claim was not allowed.

* * *

IT'S tough that the Red Sox can't creep up when the White Sox drop a game. Jimmy Callahan plays in great luck. The White Sox and Red Sox seem to be doomed to stay in that position, separated by at least two games. They've stuck that way for a long time. Saturday the margin was three, but the Red Sox won and the White Sox lost Sunday, making it two again. Yesterday, the Athletics trimmed the White Sox again, and that was Jake Stahl's chance. He and his team were not equal to it, and dropped a 4 to 3 game to Cleveland.

RED SOX BATTLE NAPS IN FINAL

CLEVELAND, June 4.—The Red Sox and Naps lined up in the fourth and final game of their series today. The Naps have already won two out of three games and are out for today's game. The Sox were confident of getting an even break.

Never did a ball club earn a more deserved victory than the Naps yesterday when they triumphed over the Red Sox, 4 to 3.

The Boston crowd got away to a flying start, scoring three runs in the opening inning on an error by Gardner, Blanding and four hits. They started to add to their total in the second by getting two men on bases and only one down when Manager Davis decided that it was not Blanding's day and substituted Jim Baskette.

It was the third time this season that Baskette has been called to the relief of Cleveland pitchers with the home club trailing, and each time he has piloted them out of the wilderness. He was in rare form yesterday, and not a Red Sox player made the acquaintance of Easterly at the home plate.

The Naps made a game uphill fight. They scored a run in the first and added another in the second on Easterly's four-base smash. In the seventh they got a lucky earned run on Peckinpaugh's single and a steal of second, Bali's infield single and a double theft by Peck and Ball, the former making a great safeway slide.

That was the fleeting count, and they served the winner served Up Jack Olson was hit, stole second, advanced to third on Gardner's high throw on Lajoie and scored on Easterly's single.

Manager Jake Stahl was shooed to the bench for an altercation with Umpire Egan. No one could blame Jake for the altercation for it looked as if the Red Sox retired Neal Ball three times before Egan finally saw the "out."

Stahl was angry, and he did not mince words in telling Egan what he thought of his poor eyesight. He probably will be in the game today.

Carlos Hall is slated to start for the Red Sox and Vean Gregg for the Naps.

JEM DRISCOLL PUTS AWAY JEAN POESY

LONDON, June 4.—Jem Driscoll, the featherweight champion of England, last night knocked out the French champion, Jean Poesy. The fight, which was before the National Sporting Club, went twelve rounds.

Cleveland Fans to Give Lajoie Purse

CLEVELAND, June 4.—The baseball "fans" of this city will present the mighty Larry Lajoie with a $1,000 purse today. This is a tribute for his great work on the diamond during his career with the Cleveland club.

The big Frenchman is one of the most popular players in the game today. He is a marvelous batter and a wonderful fielder. Besides this Lajoie is a gentleman. The local idol is a popular idol with ball players throughout the country and he is very seldom put off the field for disputing an umpire's decision.

Lajoie has been out of the game a great deal this season as the result of injuries, but he is now back and is playing a slashing game. With Larry in the line-up the Naps are sure to take many a game from the pennant contenders before the curtain drops in the Fall.

Play for Bankers and Brokers' Championship

A large delegation of Boston bankers and brokers will go to New York next Saturday to see the battle for the bankers and brokers' championship between the Dick Brothers' team and Post and Flagg, to be played at the American League Grounds.

The Dick Brothers' team will be composed of players from the Boston and New York offices and they are considered the favorite although it should be a close game. Much interest is being manifested along State street and Wall street and much money will change hands.

Former college stars will appear in the lineup of both teams. Van Vleck, the former Yale star is captain of the Dick Brothers and Burns, the best amateur pitcher of New York, will do the twirling for Dick Brothers. Bill Easby of the Boston office, will do the catching.

BERNA OUT TO BEAT PAUL WITHINGTON

ITHACA, N. Y., June 4.—Cornell's star runners, Berna and Jones, sacrificed themselves in their own events at the Intercollegiates Saturday in an effort to help the team make points, according to Coach John F. Moakley, who returned today. Berna tired himself out in the mile to get extra points, and Jones was pacing his teammates in the mile when Tabor came over him at the tape. They will both go to Cambridge Saturday for the Olympic tryouts, and the trainers say Berna will easily defeat Withington of Harvard.

PILGRIMS MEET CUBS IN THIRD

The Pilgrims and the Cubs will meet in the third game of the present series at the Walpole street park today. In yesterday's encounter, the Pilgrims displayed a near approach to a real team and gave the visitors a tonga battle right up to the final man being declared out.

There was little to choose between the two teams as to playing ability, but the horseshoe was nailed over the Cubs' dugout and they were the lucky ones.

The Pilgrims, however, and some little satisfaction in driving the mighty Three-Fingered Brown to the woods by a fusillade of hits in the seventh which netted them three runs.

K. O. BROWN LOSES TO LEACH CROSS

NEW YORK, June 4.—Leach Cross defeated Knockout Brown in a ten-round bout in Madison Square Garden last night. Brown had the better of the first two rounds, the third was even. Cross took the next six and Brown finished strong, with slightly the better of the last round.

Secondary Defence Is Important

Giants Have Great Substitutes

McGraw of the Giants places almost as much dependence in his secondary defence as he does in his regular line, and the fact that the Giants are making such a wonderful showing this early in the season proves that the McGraw theory is a sound one. But for the capabilities of that second line the New York National League club might have been in dire straits for several weeks, as some of the most valuable regulars were injured or ailing at the start of the season.

McGraw has always argued that the strength of a club is in its substitutes. He has made it a point to pay as much attention to getting high-class ball players on his bench as on the field. There is rarely a time that he does not have a second string of half a dozen prominent youngsters taking their education from the corner of the players coop, and he usually has two or three finished men who can jump in and subdue any position.

All managers now endeavor to organize a reserve force, and practically every club in the two big leagues carries its full allowance of twenty-five men—which means that half of them are substitutes, not counting the pitchers. Some managers run largely to twirlers, and carry a big flock of reserve hearing talent, but the majority are content to hold on to just a fair-sized staff that can be worked in rotation, and devote the other space to utility infielders, outfielders and catchers. The system now generally in vogue, of having a coach for the young players with the team, displaces the one working player.

When a manager is forced to place his reliance in his regulars alone, and those regulars become incapacitated, the result is sometimes very disastrous. Harry Wolverton, manager of the Yankees, ran against such a condition. His second line of defense could not produce sufficient strength when Cree, Wolter and Chase were taken out of the game, and his men were nearly all going bad at the same time.

Wolverton has gradually developed a pretty fair second line, and it is unlikely that another season will ever catch him short handed in any department. But it takes almost as much time to build up the reserve force as it does to build up the first line.

Since the return of Ed Sweeney to the Yanks, he presumably again takes his place as "first catcher," with "Gabby" Street as second man, and Williams as third. Ford is said to work better with Sweeney than with any other catcher, Johnson, the Washington wonder, has been paired off with Alnsmith by Clarke Griffith and Boehler, a recruit with John Henry, it would be hard to choose between these two catchers in point of mere ability.

Lapp usually catches Coombs, of the Athletics, although Thomas is supposed to be the "first string" man. Thomas generally works with Shawkey and Pinkney. Nunamaker and Carrigan apparently work impartially for the Boston Red Sox, and Kling divides the work with Rieder for the Boston Nationals.

McGraw could now lose the services of practically his entire first line, and still have a formidable team in the field. If Devore, Snodgrass and Murray were incapacitated at the same time, McGraw could use Beals Becker, McCormick and Burns in the outfield. Murray has been out recently and Becker filled his place acceptably. Doyle and Fletcher have also been laid up at the same time, and the infield was just as strong with Shafer and Grob working at second and short. Herzog could be out and Shafer could be shifted to third. If Merkle were incapacitated, Snodgrass would be pulled in from the outfield, and the Californian plays a rattling good first base.

Baseball Notes

A glance over the batting averages of the American Association reveals the following old Boston players among the list: Arthur Butler, the former Pilgrim leads with .431; Harry Niles, Red Sox, .329; Congalton, Red Sox, .287; Riggert, Red Sox, .283; Hayden, Red Sox, .261; Ingerton, Pilgrims, .259; Eddie Karger, Red Sox, .233; Owen Wilson, Red Sox, .228; and Hobe Ferris, Red Sox, .228.

Manager Duffy, of the Milwaukee team, has an offer of $10,000 posted for three real players, with no strings. No wonder Southern League clubs have trouble getting good men.

Zinn and Simmons, recruits, and Bert Daniels, who was released for the club few weeks ago, are the only real hitters of the York team.

The lack of originality in nicknaming ball players these days is pitiful. Avery James, "Jesse," every Young is "Cy," every Bailey is "Bill" and so on through the bromide list. All of which reminds us that Avery James has reported to the Nashville Club.

They say that the watch Philadelphia fans gave Kid Gleason is an echate affair that can do everything but talk and build bridges.

AL KAUFMAN IN JONES' 'STABLE'

By ED W. SMITH.

Hereafter, we are told, Al Wolgast is to have a stablemate. His name is Al Kaufman, twice punctured championship possibility. Tom Jones, who handles the business of the lightweight champion, recently accepted the task of guiding Al back into the spotlight of publicity among the big fellows.

Jones himself is authority for the story and announced in New York recently, that he soon would start boosting the big German from the Coast along toward something good in the way of purses. First Kaufman will take on some mediocre men out on the Coast in four-round contests. Among them will be Soldier Eagle, Miller and Horne. Kaufman hopes in this way to fight his way back into shape and then show them something when he gets among the real tough ones of the class.

Has Been Over-Confident.

Wolgast's manager accepted the Kaufman duties only after a long and thorough discussion with Kaufman. Al represented to Jones that most of his trouble in the past was caused by a failure to train properly, a condition brought on by the overconfident state of his mind when he accepted certain matches that turned out disastrously.

Kaufman has many natural qualifications to make him one of the world's best boxers. He is big and heavy, has a certain amount of speed and skill and, best of all, can punch hard, and is game as a pebble. There isn't any question of his gameness at all. He has shown it a dozen times.

Twice Kaufman has been given the severest of setbacks when it looked possible for him to fight his way into a match for the real title. Once he tackled Jack O'Brien out on the Pacific coast and was cut into ribbons by the speedy Philadelphia fighter. That was one of the few mistakes that Billy Delaney made with his men. He matched Kaufman with O'Brien when the former wasn't ready for such game.

Knocked Out by Flynn.

Something over a year ago Kaufman made a match with Jim Flynn in Kansas City that gave him even a greater setback than the O'Brien affair. Kaufman took Flynn on because the Idaho fireman looked easy and the money of the K. C. club looked like finding it. Al never trained a serious lick for the encounter, it is said, and Flynn sprung one of the sensations of the year by stopping Kaufman in nine rounds.

Al never quite recovered from that beating and later proved rather easy picking for Al Palzer in New York. So it is quite plain that Al has quite a lot of ground to make up before he can hope to receive any attention from the leader of the class, whoever he may be, after the July 4 affair in Las Vegas.

Attell to Quit Featherweights Now on Trail of Lightweights

By JACK CONWAY.

ABE ATTELL, the former featherweight king, will soon quit Billy Nolan's mountain ranch where he has been training ever since he was vanquished by "Clabber" Tommy Murphy at San Francisco on March 9. The former title holder is reported as being in wonderful condition and when he again enters the ring he will start on the trail of the leading lightweights in the land.

Abe has taken on ten pounds since he has been with Nolan and is stronger than he has been at any time in his career. When Attell again starts boxing, the "headliners" in the lightweight division had better look to their laurels.

The sturdy little fellow is a battler will, of course, experience a great deal of difficulty in again gaining recognition. He will have to start at the bottom of the ladder and slowly work his way up. The way is beset with many pitfalls and unless Abe is on his guard twenty-four hours of each day he may miss his footing and fall. And if Attell falls this time his days as a ring attraction will be over. He will be forced to leave the game.

Billy Nolan's advice and clever management will be of tremendous advantage to Attell. If any man knows the boxing game it is Nolan. He was the man who made Nelson a world's champion after the Dane had been whipped by Joe Gans at Goldfield and was supposed to be all in. It was also Nolan who skillfully arranged matches for the pride of Hegewisch so that today he is one of the richest boxers ever pulled on a padded floor.

ATTELL is now twenty-eight years of age. He has been performing in the squared circle for twelve years and has engaged in over two hundred and forty bouts. In this time he has gone out of his class over and again and has fought lightweights and even welterweights. In the majority of cases, he has been victorious. The battles with Nelson, the skillful Moran and the rugged Baldwin all knew and feared Attell.

During his long career in the ring, Attell was forced to give away weight to his opponents. The strain wore on him and sapped his vitality. He was a mere shadow of his own ability. He defeated the majority of his opponents with such ease that he thought that it was useless for him to spend long hours in the training camp.

Abe also liked the card table. He spent many hours playing cards when he should have been punching the bag or taking long runs over the roads.

For a time Attell's work in the ring was not greatly affected. He was so good that he looked like a wonder beside the average featherweight or lightweight. But finally the strain began to tell.

He made a miserable showing against Knockout Brown in New York last January, and was barred from the Empire State for a period of six months.

He then went to the coast to "train" for his bout with Kilbane. Johnny is only a kid and will be easy for me," reasoned Attell: "And so why should I waste my time training when I can make a few extra dollars playing cards?"

ATTELL did not exert himself training for his bout with Kilbane and as a result he was defeated. He was but a mere chopping block for the ambitious Cleveland youth. Then Attell fought Murphy. And again he "trained" by playing cards all night. And again he met defeat.

The gallant little battler then began to ponder. He saw his popularity decreasing and he decided to begin all over again. When Billy Nolan offered to manage him provided that he would quit card playing and all other forms of gambling, Attell consented. He has now been with Nolan for two months.

The great manager believes that Kilbane is unbeatable at 122 pounds, ringside. He also claims that Attell has more of a chance to take strain being lightweight, as there are more good men in this class.

With this idea in view, he has carefully built up Attell until he now weighs 133 pounds. With this added ten pounds of weight, Attell should be able to defeat a large number of the nifty wielders in the lightweight division especially in short bouts here in the East where Attell's wonderful science and knowledge of ring craft should enable him to vanquish many a more rugged boxer than he.

If Abe follows the straight and narrow path and lets Nolan make all of his matches, he should be heard from in the future, but if the little battler is ever gone with the lure of the card table and race track and if he gets an idea that he is a better than Nolan he is doomed.

SANDY FERGUSON has received several offers to box since he held Tom Kennedy of New York to a draw. A club at Atlantic is anxious to get Sandy to box a heavyweight by the name of Tommy Burns.

Strange to relate, few of the leading white heavyweights are very eager to tackle the twenty-four foot ring with Cherokee's esteemed citizen. Ferguson would like to get a crack at either Al Palzer, Luther McCarthy or Jim Stewart, all of whom have shown flashes of real form.

M'CARTHY is wanted by about every boxing club in the country. The big fellow from the West is touted as the real thing, but if my memory serves me right, Carl Morris and several others were supposed to be world beaters but they all went down for the count when their opponent swatted them on the right place at the right moment. We will have to be shown before we will believe that McCarthy is anything but a big, strong fellow who can hit fairly hard.

Yale Crew Takes a Spin of Eight Miles

NEW LONDON, June 4.—Yale's oarsmen yesterday put in the hardest day thus far in their daily practice on the Thames river course. Light work was done in the morning but the afternoon practice, especially for the varsity eight, wound up with a total of about eight miles.

The two varsity four oars have been united and for a week or so Coach Rodgers will have them row as a second crew, finding it more convenient to coach the men in this form.

The crew now rows as follows: Stroke, Lippincott; 7, Ives; 6, York; 5, Oldenburg; 4, Philbin; 3, Fraser; 2, Rice; bow, Richards; coxswain, Badger.

The freshman eight was shifted again today, Osborn at No. 4, and Stillman at No. 5, giving way to Meyer and Denegie, respectively.

Yale tried out her English shell yesterday morning but did not use it in the evening practice.

MANY STARS FOR STADIUM MEET

One of the greatest track and field meets ever held in this country will take place at the Harvard Stadium next Saturday afternoon. The men who make the best showing will be selected to represent the United States at the Olympic games at Stockholm, Sweden, this Summer. It is not saying too much to state that even the olympic will be no better than the meet at the Stadium.

Practically every champion in the East and many from the West, have entered. It is the first opportunity that we have ever had to compare the great college and club "stars," and the admirers of each will have an opportunity to cheer their favorites in the different events.

There is a question in the minds of many as to who is the greatest sprinter now competing in this country, and the winner of the one hundred yards at the Stadium will be crowned "King" on all.

There are so many fast men entered that it is almost impossible to name the winner. It will be a wonderful field and for those who survive the trials and semi-finals. There are many who believe Hunter Carr, the great short distance man formerly of Annapolis, is capable of defeating the marvelous Ralph Craig.

Others believe that the phenomenal Aitah Meyer of the Irish-American A. C. of New York is superior to both. But Holland of the Natier A. A. was defeated by Meyer in the 200 metre race at Celtic Park on Decoration Day and has many admirers.

New England has many good men who are liable to cause some surprises. Among the number are H. P. Drew of Springfield, the colored flyer; B. C. Foster, Frank Nardini, Francis O'Hora, S. Russell and Freddy Burns. All of these men are capable of doing close to ten seconds for the century dash. The one hundred and two hundred metres are sure to be thrillers and worth going miles to see.

When one looks over the entries in the 400 metre race, he must stop and ponder for some moments before he dare pick a winner. There are so many champions entered that it is a guess as to which one will deliver the goods in the final.

D. B. Young of the B. A. A. is a grand runner, and his performance of 49 4-5 seconds for the 440 yard dash at the Stadium last year makes him one of the favorites.

If Reidpath of Syracuse competes, he stands an excellent chance of landing first place. "Reidds" has been clocked in 48 4-5 seconds twice this season on tracks far inferior to the one at the Stadium. Reidpath's great work at the Philadelphia last Saturday, where he covered the quarter mile in 48 seconds, will not soon be forgotten.

Another man who will bear watching is William J. Hayes of the Nonpareils A. C. of Philadelphia who has been running fast all season and is expected to be in top notch form by Saturday. Ted Meredith, the world's indoor champion of Mercersburg Academy, will also be seen in action for the first time on a local track. Mike Murphy's freshman, Lippincott, is another boy who will be seen in action with the champions for the first time.

Mel Sheppard and Harry Gissing are sure to be well up among the leaders when the race ends.

Other runners to be considered are T. H. Gething, Tom B. T. Caldwell, Massachusetts Aggies; F. K. Merrihew, B. A. A.; Jim Rosenberger, Irish-American A. C. and Wylie Cooke of the University of Virginia.

Schoolboy Crews Compete Today Many Stirring Races Expected

The schoolboy oarsmen will have their chance in competition at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon, the trials for the championship of the Boston Interscholastic Rowing Association taking place on the Charles River basin.

The water conditions at that hour will determine the course to be rowed.

There will be two divisions for the championship fours and two for the second fours. The fours winning in the championship divisions will qualify for the final, which will be held Thursday, and the second fours winning in the second division will also participate in the event Thursday.

Yesterday marked the final practice of the season and all showed up splendidly. The work consisted of short sprints and long runs. Cambridge Latin is a slight favorite in the first championship division.

The orders today will be:

Cambridge Latin is considered the favorite in the preliminaries this afternoon and for that boat to be swept on Thursday. The Cambridge Latin crew is heavy, has experienced men and has been showing fast work in practice this week. Coxswain Coleman has put his boys through a lot of hard work and feels that he is fairly confident that the crew will be the first to cross the finish line. Boston Latin has the other three men working in close with precision with him.

Thomas Harrington is in seat three. Whitehouse in seat two, Tuttle in bow and Blake is coxswain.

Rindge Technical has a fair crew and will give its opponents a stiff race. Boston Latin has been working good in the practice spins and will push Austin Tarbell's heaves his boys have a good chance to defeat the high boys. Boston English, High and Commerce High also have fairly strong fours and will put up a hard fight.

Rindge, Cambridge Latin and Boston English High will take in the first heat. Two crews will qualify and Rindge and Cambridge Latin are picked to place for the finals. The race is bound to be close as the boys are to the best of condition for the mile and seven-eighths course.

Brookline High, Boston Latin and the High School of Commerce crews will line up in the second heat and Brookline and Latin are picked to win the places.

Among the second crews, Commerce, Boston Latin and Brookline High will race in the first heat and Rindge, Cambridge Latin and English will go in the second.

SCHOOLBOY NOTES

Davidson, the young Medford High pitcher, is proving himself to be one of the best schoolboy pitchers developed at that school for some time. His record of six out of nine games this year speaks for itself.

* * *

Everett High may lose its hold on first place in the Suburban League this week. Coach O'Donnell's charges will stack up against Somerville High tomorrow and then on Saturday will try conclusions with Medford.

* * *

It is being whispered around the school boy circles that Somerville has something in the way of a surprise in store for Everett tomorrow. The game between Everett here won both games.

* * *

And by the way, Somerville surely stuck a bad spell on Arlington's game against Medford. It looks as though the hot weather has abated the wearers of the red and blue is gaining their much missed batting eyes.

* * *

A spectator at the recent St. John's Prep-Boston College High game spoke very highly of Gill of Gill the Boston pitcher. It was the first defeat in fifteen games for the runners boys and Gill certainly held them in check. He is a cool, unassuming chap, with plenty of curves, a fairly good speed and perfect control.

Exeter is picked to defeat Andover on Saturday, when the two famous rivals meet for their annual game. The New Hampshire team has been playing a wonderful game this season, while Andover's work has been a puzzle to some years.

* * *

Captain Harry Jewett's Commerce boys have been showing the way to some of the crack schools this season and on Saturday they play William High, which has made a noteworthy record this season.

HARVARD CREWS OUT ON THAMES

HARVARD TRAINING QUARTERS, Red Top, (P. O.), June 4.—The Harvard crews lost no time in taking to the river, after their arrival here yesterday afternoon.

Both varsity and freshmen crews were ordered to 4m their rowing togs as soon as they reached the boat house. The varsity eight were first to launch a shell, followed by the varsity fours, freshmen eight and four respectively.

A light southwest wind ruffled the course as the big eight pulled away from the float, and a sweltering sun probably would have blistered the backs of the athletes had not the rubber, "Jimmy" Fallon, smeared oliva all on every man's back.

The crews were coached by "Jim" Wray, who was perched with a megaphone on the bow of the little speed launch Pup. Harvard's big crew men have a more seasoned appearance that their Yale rivals, and gave a fine exhibition of watermanship as they pulled diagonally across to Bartlett's Point, now the starting flag.

All the boats went down stream to the third mile mark in fine stretches, the varsity eight pulling a twenty-six stroke along the first part. Every shell was off the river and housed by 6 o'clock.

Captain Trumbull of the freshmen eight, who has been in the stick for, was back in his old position at No. 3 this afternoon replacing Trumbull, who rowed No. 3 in the four-oared.

MALONEY TO JOIN YANKEES AT DETROIT

BROCKTON, June 4.—Outfielder Maloney, who was recently sold by the Brockton baseball club to the New York High landers, left today to join the team at Detroit. He will be used to take the place of Centerfielder Zinn, who was injured in a recent game, but has been kept in the line up. Kauff, recruit who has played with the New Yorks in a few games, is to come to the Brockton team.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S DAILY DOUBLE

When a Thing's Beyond Explaining

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Why did she love him? Curious fool to be still.

Is human love the growth of human will?—LORD BYRON.

A GIRL falls in love with a man. The world lifts its hands in amaze.

"Whatever," it asks, "does she see in him?"

A question as old as love itself, and one that has never been answered.

Search-light matches are made that no one wonders sometimes if Cupid is not only blind, but insane. For surely no one with sanity would have made such shafts of matrimony.

Why Is It?

A girl is taught to abhor a certain type of man. She learns the lesson. Indeed, often she abhors that type without having heard a parental warning. It seems to be her nature to despise that character trait most prominent in the man she later meets. And loves!

This happens so often that one must conclude the heart and the head not in conflict, and the heart won.

It is not sage to win that the only safeguard parents can throw around a girl to prevent her from loving the type of man they abhor, and which she in her sane moments abhorred, is to limit her acquaintance to the type of men they approve. Girls are permitted an acquaintance with men who are not desirable as friends, and much less desirable as sweethearts.

"It has been said, and it is proven every day, that a father will permit a young man to take his daughter out with whom he would not trust his horse.

And mothers are just as lax. They know their daughters have made a new acquaintance. Often they do not know how, and usually they don't know whom. The young man calls, and is well treated. He takes the girl out frequently, he calls regularly, love develops, and THEN, and not till then, do the parents investigate.

The investigation leads to alarm, but it is made too late. The mischief has been done. The girl they taught to abhor certain characteristics in men has fallen in love with a man who possesses all, or the worst of them.

They wonder at her. They marvel that all their years of training should have so little effect.

They should wonder at themselves. They should marvel that parents can be so blind.

They knew the destination of a certain path and saw their daughter start on it without a single misgiving.

They welcomed the young man many times, and their welcome and lack of disapproval helped to win him a way in your heart.

Parents to Blame.

They know that love is not the growth of human will. Therefore they should have seen to it that their daughter did not have opportunity to meet, to know, to love a man of whom they could not approve.

The blame for the tragedy of a misplaced love rests on their shoulders.

The Manicure Lady

"BROTHER WILFRED got pinched yesterday," said The Manicure Lady. "The poor boy was that hysterical down at the jail that the warden had to take away his penknife that I gave him on his last birthday."

"I didn't know that your brother was a criminal," said the Head Barber. "What's the matter with the town, anyway? Is everything going wrong?"

"My brother ain't no criminal," said the Manicure Lady. "He is one of the dearest boys that ever lived. This was a case where he was just careless. It was something about complimentary proceedings, or whatever they call it. George, what is complimentary proceedings? I have heard a lot about them."

"It ain't complimentary proceedings," replied the Head Barber. "You mean supplementary proceedings. It means that a little lawyer five feet six can bollyrag a big defendant six feet five. He can bring him if his father and mother have money. He can ask him if his wife works for a living, and, if so, how much she makes. He can ask him how much his necktie cost, and all that sort of rot. The only good thing about supplementary proceedings is that they don't bring home bacon one time in a thousand. Well, what about Wilfred?"

"The poor boy got a summons to appear in them proceedings," answered the Manicure Lady, "and being that he is as forgetful as a baseball bug, he forgot to show up in court at the right time. Then the little lawyer served another paper on him, something thig was like an order to show cause why he should not be pinched for contempt of court. Wilfred forgot about that, too, and the next thing he knew was when a deputy sheriff came up to the house and grabbed him when he was right in the middle of a sonnet.

"Wilfred wanted to wait until he had wrote the last six lines, but the deputy assistant doesn't care nothing about poetry, I guess. Anyway, away goes Wilfred, and it took all the influence that the old gent has to get him out of that there Bastile."

"I don't like to see a kid like your brother getting to be on the crook order," observed the Head Barber.

"What in the world do you mean?" demanded the Manicure Lady. "If I thought my brother did one-tenth of the sneaky little tricks that I see you getting away with around here, he couldn't live under the same roof with me. Take yesterday for instance, George. You know that little stump that came in here with a hangover and asked for a shave once over. You seen right away that he was sleepy, and you soaked him for a dollar's worth of work before you got through."

"He nodded his head when I asked him if he wanted a haircut," said the Head Barber," guiltily.

"He didn't do no such thing!" declared the Manicure Lady. "When he got in that chair he said good and plain that he wanted a shave once over and nothing else. After you had shaved him once over, and he was sitting up in the chair, you asked him if he wanted a haircut, but very kind of the look of his head and pushed it forward so it looked just as if he nodded 'Yes.' Why don't you pick out a yellow cake most once in a while, George? I'm wise to you and your finagling. Don't ever dare to call my brother a crook again."

Kitchen Wrinkles

In a mixture of two ounces of salt to a pint of water good eggs will be found to sink, while indifferent ones will always float.

To take out a scorch from a shirt front, or any article, lay it where the sunshine will fall on it. It will leave it clean and white.

Canned fruit should be opened an hour or two before it is used. It becomes richer after the oxygen of the air has been restored to it.

Next time you make mustard, mix it with milk instead of water, and you will find that it will not become dry, but will keep fresh until it is used up.

The seats of cane chairs should be scrubbed with soap and water, and then soaked with very hot water and dried out of doors, as this will stiffen them.

By immersing an ink-stained handkerchief in milk immediately after it has been stained, and allowing it to soak, the ink will invariably disappear.

Freaks of Fashion

No. 1—The Pagoda Parasol

CALLED A FREAK—BUT SENSIBLE.

The aeroplane umbrella is a huge, octagon-shaped thing, built to shade the lady with the wide, flaring hat. It is one of the new parasols of Paris already imstamped it with her full approval. In these parasols the mode which has tried so hard to inflict upon us some glaring innovation in dress consoles herself by radically changing the contour of the old-fashioned umbrella and making it of the warmest material—namely, velvet.

A bit of velvet will be on the parasol to prove it is the latest thing. Some have deep black velvet bands with white satin tops. Others have diamond-shaped medallions of velvet in lace covers. Another aeroplana umbrella of black satin has a border of black velvet with hand-painted roses upon it. Really, the makers' imaginations have run riot in designing and executing these adjuncts to the feminine Sunnon of fashion. The material and design they are all new and at first they are startling, but one accustoms oneself to everything, and soon we shall see nothing extraordinary in a two-story or even a three-story sunshade.

The handles of these parasols often cost a small fortune. One of solid gold, supposed to have been in the possession of Marie Antoinette, is a specimen of beautiful filigree work; another of carved ivory and for the rest tortoise shell, coral amethyst, agate and crystal or metal and ivory inlaid with precious stones bring the bill for the Summer parasol up into a small fortune.

By Magaret Hubbard Ayer

HERE is the new pagoda umbrella, which looks like a freak and isn't.

You remember how hot it always got under the dainty silk and lace parasols of yesterday when the sun shone and not a breath of air reached you. The only consolation you had on a warm day was that you were saving your complexion and looking picturesque.

Well, here is a parasol with a regular ventilating system, and if any kind of breeze is blowing, you will get it under your new sunshade.

The pagoda umbrella is built in two stories, a small one over a sunshade of larger size, pagoda shaped, with the sides beat down sharply. There are a number of small openings between the two decks, as one might call them, and the air can circulate inside the umbrella, which should make it popular in the boiling months, especially on boardwalk promenades and all other equally warm spots.

Pagoda parasols come in all kinds of fantastic colors and materials. The white silk ones, heavily embroidered, are most attractive, but black and pink ones deserve a word of praise. Carried in a frill dressed in one of the oddest fashions of the moment, and wearing one of the new small hats, it should be considerously pretty.

Married Life the Third Year

No. 45—Mrs. Griffen Admits to Helen That She Has Not Progressed With Her Husband

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

THERE is nothing that so discomforts the average Bostonian as to hear an out of town visitor the sights of Boston, and that the visitor is in no way impressed.

The stories of the great city that drift to the little western towns are so exaggerated and highly colored that when the villager does come on he is disappointed. Because whatever he may see, he expected a great deal more.

And the Bostonian who proudly shows him about is both annoyed and baffled at his quiet acceptance of everything and his utter lack of enthusiasm.

In a way Helen had something of this experience when she took Mrs. Griffen to a matinee and tea a few days after she had called.

But Mrs. Griffen's lack of enthusiasm was not because she had expected a great deal more, but only because she was pathetically listless and indifferent. Unquestionably she was homesick. Her heart was not in Boston or in any of its sights.

Helen soon discovered this, and her really sympathy went out to the simple home-loving little woman who cared nothing for the luxurious hotel where her husband had chosen to stop, nor for the great shops at which his wealth enabled her to buy without limit.

Shopped but Once

She and that she had been shopping only once, for the crowded stores and variety of goods merely bewildered her. And Helen promised to go with her some afternoon.

"James wants me to get some clothes while I'm here, but I don't know what to get," she admitted, pathetically.

As they left the theatre and walked a couple of blocks to the fashionable restaurant where Helen had thought it would be interesting to have tea she found that Mrs. Griffen was really timid about crossing the streets. She seemed confused by the mass of traffic and was plainly relieved when they were safely seated in a palm-screened corner of the tea room.

It was a most attractive room. The coldness of the pale green and white decorations was softened by the pink shaded lights and the vase of pink carnations on each table. It was the hour when "five o'clock tea" was at its height, and the pompous head waiters were finding it difficult to seat all the people. An orchestra was playing softly and the murmurous hum of conversation mingled with the music.

While Helen ordered the tea and toasted muffins, Mrs. Griffen looked around at the many richly gowned women who filled the tables. But there was little interest in her gaze.

"When do you expect to return?" asked Helen for want of something else to say.

"I had hoped we could start Tuesday," and there was a wistful note in her voice, "But now James says he will have to stay at least another week."

Bewildered by City

"Then I'm afraid Boston doesn't appeal to you," smiled Helen, "If after only a week you're so anxious to get away?"

"I think it bewilders me. I can't get used to the rush and noise. It seems to me that every one has worked themselves up to a feverish pitch from which they must relax the next moment, but they never do."

"No, I suppose Bostonians never really do relax," mused Helen. "When my mother was here she said it seemed to her that every one had been delayed somewhere and was hurrying to make up the time."

"Yes, that's how it impressed me. Perhaps if I were younger I could get into the spirit of things more, but now"—there was a quiver in her voice; "Oh, I think I'm homesick."

"But Mr. Griffen seems so much interested in the city," murmured Helen, not knowing just what to say.

"Oh, yes, James loves the excitement. And he is interested in everything. I suppose I ought to try to keep up with things here—just for his sake. But, somehow, I can't."

She hesitated a moment, and then went on as though yielding to the impulse to confide in some one.

"That's another reason why I'm so anxious to get back—because James seems further away from me here. At home, while he has other interests, still we have the interest of the home together. But here we haven't anything; he doesn't tell me about the things he's doing here, because he knows I wouldn't understand. Oh, I wish now I hadn't always given in so my time to the home and the children. If only I'd spent some of it keeping in touch with things!"

Too Late, She Says

"But don't you do that now?" asked Helen eagerly. "You have so much time and every opportunity."

Mrs. Griffen shook her head. "No, it's too late now. I couldn't if I tried. I haven't the incentive any more. And he's gone too far beyond me—I could never catch up. It's the money," sadly. "If James hadn't made so much money, we'd be much nearer together now. It isn't his fault. He wanted me to go places and do things with him, but I was always too busy taking care of the house and the children. Now the children are grown up—and the house, well we have so many servants now there isn't very much left for me to do."

Then suddenly realizing how much she had said, she flused slightly.

"I don't know why I'm saying all this. I'm afraid it's being alone so much in that hotel that has made me morbid."

But just here the waiter came up with the hot tea, and Helen was spared a reply. Then the conversation drifted on to something else.

Grown Apart

But Helen had had a glimpse of the heartache of another woman. And it was a very different heartache from anything she had ever known.

Here was a woman whom the world would think had everything that wealth and a loyal, kindly husband could give. And yet because she could not share her husband's interest, because he had progressed while she stood still—she now felt pitifully helpless and alone.

Her husband had outgrown her. And for a woman there is no greater tragedy than this. It means a slow but sure and inevitable growing apart. As the man's interest broadens, the woman's seems to grow more narrow.

Under any circumstances a woman ages more quickly than a man, and when he lives a vigorous active life, and she an inactive one—the difference is much accentuated. She will become an old woman, while he is still in his prime, with his whole attitude toward life a youthful one.

A Tragedy

And now as Helen sat opposite Mrs. Griffen she vaguely sensed all this. She had seen Mr. Griffen but once, and then for only a few moments, but it had been long enough for her to realize that in every way except in years he was much younger than his wife. He had the air of the active man of affairs, while his wife—Helen looked across the table at the plain little woman in her simple black dress and felt more than ever the tragedy that was in her life.

And as Helen always applied everything to herself, she now began a rigid self-scrutiny as to whether she was in the least danger of drifting into the same mistake.

Was she keeping up with Warren's interest as much as she might? Did she encourage him to talk over with her his work? She gave a quick alarm at the many evenings that he buried himself in his papers and hardly spoke to her, and now, lately, he had told her very little of his plans.

When she left Mrs. Griffen at the entrance of the great hotel she walked slowly home, planning countless ways in which she would interest herself anew in Warren's work, and in all the things that interested him. At any cost she would not stand still while he progressed. Never would she let him outgrow her.

Getting On in Life

No. 8—Health

By THOMAS TAPPER

I.

HEALTH is the great asset.

The normal person up to the age of twenty-five has more energy than he needs; from twenty-five to fifty energy and needs are about equal; after fifty, energy generally lessens.

If by ignorance or foolishness (which is worse than ignorance) the balance is destroyed, either to twenty-five or to fifty, it is more than likely that the individual will not see sixty or seventy, not even fifty, perhaps.

Getting on in life involves health primarily. Perhaps it is true that every human being must make out his own rules and follow them, but of four things at least the rules must be followed carefully by everybody. They concern Food, Drink, Breathing, Sleep.

Though informed writers are unanimous in saying that people eat more than they need. They ascribe inactivity, indolence, laziness and doing nothing generally to over eating which wrecks the body, dulls the senses and puts the mind to sleep. They are probably right.

The duty of every one of us in this is to learn to eat for nourishment, and to avoid imitating a boaconstrictor that swells itself out with six rabbits and goes to sleep.

If getting on in life is due to health, then health must be so looked after that there is always plenty of mind energy on which to do business. Mind energy is the most precious possession we have. To shut it off by eating two plates of turkey when one is enough is a crime.

We drink too little and too much. Too little of the one great drink provided free to all—water—and too much of the drinks that are never provided free to anybody—namely, water mixed with alcohol. Water is the natural thirst quencher. It may be necessary for us to acquire a taste for it, but it is worth while. It is also the natural cleanser. Simple food and plenty of water inside and out are as good as a life insurance policy.

The commonest habit, of mankind is breathing. If it stopped for more than a few seconds, there would be no mankind. What do we breathe? Air; that is, pure air; not the same poisoned atmosphere over and over again of a closed room. Let it fill the lungs through the nostrils, not through the mouth, and have plenty of it as pure as it can be had, day and night.

Keep the windows wide open at night, and let the burglar come in if he wants to. You can better afford to drive him out than commit suicide slowly by closing up the house to keep him out. You lock out your own breath at the same time.

II.

An Italian by the name of Luigi Cornaro was given up by the doctors. He was thirty-five years old, and they pronounced him that he would never see forty. This information would have been enough in itself to kill most people. But it simply made him mad—fighting mad, in fact. He took himself in hand and began to study his own case. Recognizing himself as the owner of his own body, he determined to look it over and see what he could do with it. To keep it going even to forty required, he saw, food, drink, air and sleep. He studied these four things with the mind of a man who intends to be master of the situation. He began to eat the food that agreed with him, and not too much. After eating it he forgot all about it. He drank water, and kept the body clean. He breathed as nature intended he should, so as to fill the lungs with pure air through the nostrils, and he slept regularly.

He passed the forty-first milestone safely, and the forty-second, and so on until he reached his eighty-third, when he had enough energy left to write a book describing how he did it. Some years later he wrote another report of his progress, at eighty-eight, and still a third time, at ninety-five. He died at the age of ninety-eight, having added by his own observation of himself, and by practice, just fifty-five years more than the doctors gave him.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

IT is a question which is the easier, to go forward at a church revival or to slide backward after it is over.

Lysander John Appleton and his wife went forward. Far be it from us to watch for the time when they will begin to slide backward.

When a man and his wife are seen together on the streets it is usually one of two occasions. They are going to a funeral or to a theatre.

The exception ruled in the case of Lysander John and his wife, who were on the streets together on their way to a revival service.

The revivalist was one of the weeping sort. He told such woeful and sorrowful tales of unrepentant backsliding that before he had concluded his hearers were in such a state of weeping and overcharged saturation that it was necessary only to poke a finger into a sinner and his tears began to flow.

It was like touching a sponge that was soaked full it could take up no more.

Mrs. Appleton, being sentimental, soon succumbed, and fairly dripped in her woe. Lysander John, being sympathetic, blinked his eyes and blew his nose, and wished he hadn't come.

Both went forward for prayers. Mrs. Appleton knelt as was customary for her to get converted, and habit is every thing, and Lysander John to escape the reproachful eyes of those already saved.

And then and there in the aisle, Lysander John confessed his greatest crime.

Confesses His Crime

"I robbed the refrigerator," he said, "and let you believe some one had broken into the house.

"But it was a great disappointment," he said, feeling that even in his moment of spiritual exaltation he must defend himself.

"The outside of a refrigerator has looked good to me all my life. When a boy I always was curious to know what was inside, and imagined puddings and jellies and frozen custards and fruits. One day I got into the one at home!

"There was a dab of boiled rice," showing more emotion, "which I upset in the milk trying to get out, and a glass of jelly, but some one had upset salad dressing over it. There was a piece of pie, but some one had spilled catsup over it, the cheese had flirted with the prunes, and a chicken bone was all I found that wasn't contaminated by too close association with something else.

"It was a great disappointment to me, which I hope will lessen the enormity of my crime in your eyes."

Mrs. Lysander John said nothing that night, but for the next two days she acted so strangely her husband began to wonder if the refrigerator incident had decided her on getting a divorce.

She Told All

Then she told all. She, too, had been a thief. With tears in her eyes, and a sob in her voice, she handed Lysander John two dollar bills and seventeen cents, all in pennies and nickels and dimes, and all looking as if they had been laid away for years.

"It represents," she said, "what I have taken from your pockets at night for the last twenty-seven years.

"Last night I found nothing there, and the amounts were so small when I did that the search has been a great disappointment. So disappointed, I hope it will lessen the enormity of my crime in your eyes."

Lysander John grew very thoughtful as he sat with the money in his hands.

"It never occurred to me before," he said to himself after many days of speculation, "how many ways there are for a man to be a disappointed to his wife."

Do You Know That—

Fishermen of Cezimbo, Portugal, have a novel method of catching fish by the use of a natural phosphorescent substance. This is obtained from a fish known as Malacocephalus laevis and is a thick yellowish fluid which possesses a bluish phosphorescence in the dark, believed to be due to the presence of a luminous microbe. The fishermen rub this substance upon a muscular tissue, such as a piece of cuttlefish, and this is used as bait. The light appears to last for a long time, at least for several hours, and has a brighter glow when dipped in the sea. Fish are attracted to the bait by the light and are thus caught.

PART I.—(Continued.)

"I THINK I can tell you. Influence goes a long way. Talent occasionally counts. Then, a well-known agent may, for a nominal fee, get an opening for a handsome, well-built girl who has taken lessons from either himself or some one of his friends in dancing or singing, or both."

"Is such a thing possible for a domestic servant?"

"It all depends upon the domestic servant's circle of acquaintances. As a rule, I should say not. A theatre like this requires a higher average of intelligence."

This and more, Bruce well knew, but he was only making conversation, while he thought intently, almost fiercely, upon the latest phase of his strange quest.

During the third act he devoted more time to Mrs. Hillmer. If that sprightly dame were a little astonished at the celerity with which he conducted her to her carriage and the waiting Dobson, it was banished by the nice way in which he thanked her for the pleasure she had conferred.

"The enjoyment has been mostly on my side," she cried, as he stood near the window of her brougham. "Come to see me again soon."

He bowed and would have said something if an imperious policeman had not ordered the coachman to make way for the next vehicle. So Mrs. Hillmer was whisked into the traffic.

From the force of habit, he glanced casually at the crowd struggling through the exit of the theatre, and he caught sight of Mr. White, who, too late, averted his round eyes and strove to shield his portly form in the portico of a neighboring restaurant.

He did not want to be bothered by the detective just then. He lit a cigarette, and Mr. White slid off quietly into the stream of traffic, finally crossing the road and jumping on to a Charing Cross 'bus.

"So," said Claude to himself, "White has been watching Raleigh Mansions, and watching me, too. 'Pon my honor, I shouldn't wonder if he suspected me of the murder! I'm glad I saw him just now. For the next couple of hours I wish to be free from his interference."

Waiting for a few moments to make sure that White had not detailed an aide-de-camp to continue the surveillance, he buttoned his overcoat to the chin, tilted his hat forward, and strolled round to the stage door of the Jollity Theatre.

Miss Marie Le Marchant.

THE uncertain rays of a weak lamp, struggling through panes dulled by dirt and black letters, cast a fitful light about the precincts of the stage door.

Elderly women and broken-down men, slovenly and unkempt, kept fugitive guard over the exit, waiting for the particular "super" to come forth who would propose the expected adjournment to a favorite public house. Some smart broughams, a four wheeler, and a few hansoms, formed a close line along the pavement, which was soon crowded with the hundred-odd hangers-on of a theatre—scene shifters, gasmen, limelight men, members of the orchestra, dressers and attendants—mingling with the small stream of artists constantly pouring out into the cold night after a casual inquiry for letters at the office of the doorkeeper.

This being a fashionable place of amusement, there were not wanting several representatives of the gilded youth, some obviously ginger-bread or "unleavened" imitations, others callow specimens of the genuine article.

Bruce paid little heed to them as they impudently peered beneath each broad-leafed and high-feathered hat to discover the charmer honored by their chivalrous attentions.

Yet the presence of this brigade of light-hearted cavaliers helped the barrister far more than he could have foreseen or even hoped.

The Lady's Maid Appears

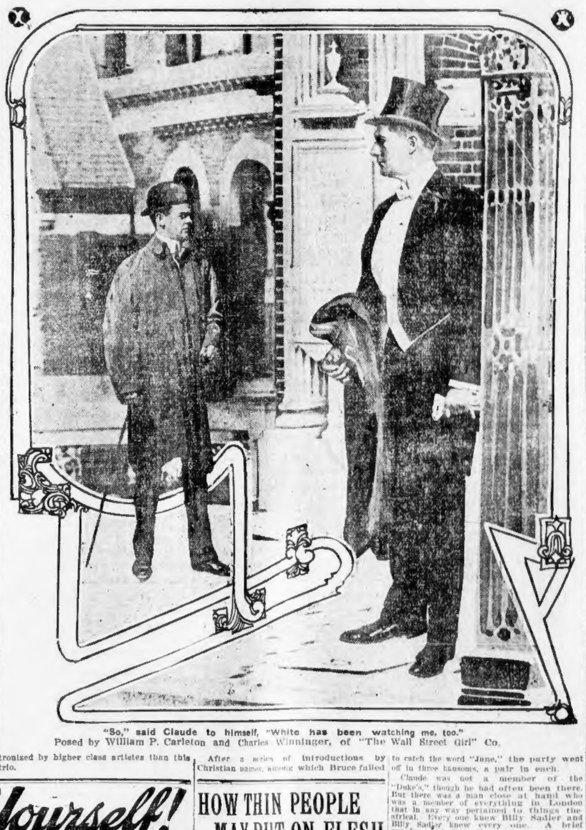
At last the ex-lady's maid appeared, dressed in a showy Winter costume and jaunty toque. She was on very friendly terms with two other girls on whom the stage had set its ineffaceable seal, and the reason was soon apparent.

"Come along," she cried, her words being evidently intended to have an effect on others in the throng less favored than those whom she addressed. "Let us get into a hansom and go to Scott's for supper. Here, cabby!"

She was on the step of a hansom when a tall, good-looking boy, faultlessly dressed, and with something of Sandhurst or Woolwich in his carriage, darted forward.

"Hello, Millie," he said to one of Jane Harding's companions. "How are you? A couple of fellows have come up with me for the night. Let's all go and have something to eat at the Duke's," thereby indicating a well-known club usually patronized by higher class artistes than this trio.

BRUCE LEARNS THAT HE IS BEING WATCHED



"So," said Claude to himself, "White has been watching me, too."
Posed by William P. Carleton and Charles Winninger, of "The Wall Street Girl" Co.

After a series of introductions by Christian names, among which Bruce failed to catch the word "Jane," the party went off in three hansoms, a pair in each.

Claude was not a member of the "Duke's," though he had often been there. But there was a man close at hand who was a member of everything in London that in any way pertained to things theatrical. Every one knew Billy Sadler and Billy Sadler knew every one. A brief run in a cab to a theatre, a restaurant, and another restaurant, revealed the large-hearted Billy, drinking a whiskey and soda and relating to a friend, with great gusto and much gesticulation, the very latest quarrel between the stage manager and the leading lady. He hailed Claude with enthusiasm.

"'Pon my soul, Bruce, old chap, haven't seen you for an age. Where have you bin? An' what's the little game now?"

Mr. Sadler was fully aware of the barrister's penchant for investigating mysteries. The two had often foregathered in the past.

"Are you 'busy'?" said Bruce.

"Not a bit. By-by, Jack. See you at luncheon tomorrow at the Gorgonzola. Well, what is it?"

"I want you to come with me to 'Duke's.' There's a young lady there I'm interested in."

Billy squeezed round in the hansom, which was now bowling across a corner of Trafalgar square.

"You!" he cried. "After a girl! Is she in the profession? Is mamma frightened about her angel? The correct figure for a breach just now, my boy, is five thou'."

"Oh, it's nothing serious. I will tell you all about it when matters have cleared a bit. It is a mere item in a really big story. But, here we are. Take me straight to the supper room."

As they entered the comfortable, brightly lit club the strains of a band came pleasantly to their ears and in a minute they were installed at a corner table in the splendid room devoted to the most cheery of all gatherings—a Bohemian meal when the labors of the night are past.

Bruce soon marked his quarry. Jane Harding was in great form—eating, drinking, and talking at the same time.

"Who is that, Billy?" he said, indicating the girl.

Sadler carefully balanced his pincenez on his well refined nose, gazed, and laughed: "Goodness knows. She's a newcomer, and not much at the best. Do you know where she carries a banner?"

"At the Jollity."

He Finds Out

"Oh! then here's our man"—for a Mephistophelian gentleman was passing at the moment. "Say, Rosenheim, who's the new coryphee over there?"

Mephistopheles halted, looked at Jane and laughed, too. "Her name is Miss Marie le Marchant; but as she happened to be born in London she pronounces it Mahrie Lee Mahshunt, with the accent on the 'Mahs.' Anything else you would like to know?"

"Yes, I'm stuck on her! Where did you pick her up?"

"She's a housemaid, or something of the sort. Came into money. Wants to knock 'em on the stage. The rest is easy."

"Has she been with you long?" put in Claude, as their informant was the under-manager of the Jollity.

Mr. Rosenheim glanced at him. Sadler, he knew, had no interest in the girl, and the barrister did not quite possess the juvenile appearance that warranted such solicitude.

"She joined us just before Christmas. What's up? Is she really worth a lot of 'oof'?"

"I should imagine not," laughed Bruce; and Mr. Rosenheim joined another group.

Supper ended, Marie and Millie, and else Flossie, attended by their swains, discussed coffee and cognac in the foyer.

Chance separated Miss le Marchant, as she may now be known, momentarily from the others, and Bruce darted forward.

"Good evening," he said. "I am delighted to meet you here."

The girl recognized him instantly. She would have denied her identity, but her nerve failed her before those steadfast, penetrating eyes. Moreover, it was not an ill thing for such a well-bred, well-dressed man to acknowledge her so openly.

Betrays Embarrassment

"Good evening, Mr. Bruce," she said, with a smile of assurance, though her voice faltered a little.

He resolved to make the situation easy.

"We have not met for such a long time," he said; "and I am simply dying to have a talk with you. I am sure your friends will pardon me if I carry you off for five minutes to a quiet corner."

With a simper, Miss le Marchant took his proffered arm, and they went off to an unoccupied table.

"Now, Jane Harding," said he, with some degree of sternness in his manner, "be good enough to explain to me why you are passing under a false name, and the reasons which led you to leave Sir Charles Dyke's house in such a particularly disagreeable way."

"Disagreeable? I only left in a hurry. Who has any right to stop me?"

"No one, in a sense, except that Sir Charles Dyke may feel inclined to prosecute you."

"For what, Mr. Bruce?"

This emancipated servant girl was not such a simpleton as she looked. It was necessary to frighten her and at the same time to force her to admit the facts with reference to her sensational flight from Wensley House.

"You must know," he said, "that Sir Charles Dyke can proceed against you in the County Court to recover wages in lieu of notice, and this would be far from pleasant for you in your new surroundings."

"Yes, I know that. But why should Sir Charles Dyke, or you, or any other gentleman, went to destroy a poor girl's prospects in that fashion?"

"Surely, you must feel that some explanation is due to us for your extraordinary behavior?"

"No, I don't feel a bit like it."

"But why did you go away?"

"To suit myself."

HOW THIN PEOPLE MAY PUT ON FLESH

Great Discovery by Eminent Specialist

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing the arms, neck and bust and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness, and it therefore gives us real pleasure to publish herewith a simple prescription which, by correcting faulty metabolism and stimulating the activity of certain sluggish vital organs, quickly produces a marvelous transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently averaging from 4 to 5 pounds the first week, and very rarely less than 2. This increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Catarrh, dyspepsia and nervousness, which nearly always accompanies excessive thinness, all gradually disappear; dull eyes become bright and pale cheeks glow with a bloom of perfect health.

... prescription, which contains no dangerous drugs and is absolutely harmless, calls for 2 oz. Tincture Cardamoms Compound, 2 oz. Fluid of Saltogyn, 2 oz. Elixir of Calisaya and enough water to fill an 8-oz. bottle, and can readily be prepared by any druggist. One or two tablespoonfuls should be taken about 20 minutes before each meal. Eat all you want but chew your food thoroughly.

(CAUTION: Although the above prescription is unequaled for relieving nervousness, indigestion and catarrhal troubles, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.)

FAMOUS IN A DAY FOR THE BEAUTY OF HER HANDS AND ARMS

A Free Prescription That Does Its Work Over Night—You Can Prepare It at Your Own Home.

"It's my own discovery, and it takes just one night to get such marvelous results," answers Miss Grace Benson, when her friends asked her about the marvelous change in the appearance of her hands and arms. "You can do the same thing if you will take my advice," she says. "I feel it my duty to tell every woman what this wonderful prescription did for me. Just think of it! It did all this in a night.

It affords me a world of pleasure to tell anyone else just how such remarkable results were brought about. I give you, absolutely free, the identical prescription which has removed every defect from my hands and arms. You can form no idea of the marvelous change it will make in just one application. The prescription, which can be prepared at your own home, is as follows:

Go to any drug store and buy an ounce bottle of Kulux Compound. Pour the entire bottle of Kulux into a two-ounce bottle, add quarter ounce of witch hazel and fill with water. Mix this at home, then you know that it is the genuine article. Apply night and morning. The first application will astonish you. It makes the skin transparent, removes all discolorations such as tan, sun spots, freckles and coarse pores, roughness and wrinkles, and, in fact, every blemish the hands and arms are heir to. It also produces a marvelous effect on the neck and shoulders.

If the neck is discolored from being exposed to the sun or from wearing high collars, this prescription will immediately relieve that condition. No matter how rough and ungainly the hands and arms, or what abuses they have had through hard work and exposure to sun and wind, this prescription will work a wonderful transformation in twelve hours at the most. Thousands of women are using this prescription with just the same results that I have had

'Resinol does stop itching instantly!'

Does your skin itch and burn with eczema or other tormenting, unsightly skin trouble? Then simply wash the sore place with Resinol Soap and hot water, dry, and apply a little Resinol Ointment.

The itching stops at once, you no longer have to scratch, sleep becomes possible, and healing begins. That is because the soothing, healing Resinol balsams strike right into the surface, arrest the action of the disease, let the tortured, inflamed skin rest, and almost always restore it to perfect health, rapidly and at little expense.

This treatment is especially good for such eruptions as those caused by poison ivy, poison oak, brown-tail moth, etc. Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment are also most effective for pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, dandruff and falling hair, and for healing sores, burns and piles. Your druggist sells them, but for generous free sample, write to Dept. 2C, Resinol Chem. Co., Baltimore, Md.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS AND ALL THE LATEST FINANCIAL NEWS AND GOSSIP

Stock Market Reflects Rise in Price of Copper

W. H. ROSS

By W. H. ROSS.

STATE STREET, June 4.—Midday: Copper issues were stronger and the market, which was active, had much more scope when trading in Boston began. Most of the stocks in this list made gains. Among those which advanced a point or more during the first hour were Lake, Calumet & Arizona and Mohawk. Osceola and Quincy sold 2 points higher, while Ahmeek gained 10.

In the metal market it is said that extensive foreign buying continues, but that the advance in price of copper has not stimulated domestic demand.

During May the Phelps-Dodge smelters produced 12,909,988 pounds of copper, compared with 11,811,063 in April this year and 11,283,309 pounds in May, 1911.

The New York market was strong all the morning and much more active than yesterday. Hard coal roads made the most gains among rail during the first hour. Reading went up 1⅜ and Lehigh Valley 1¼.

New York Market Stronger.

There was more strength to the stock market in New York at the opening and among issues to ascend at the start was American Tobacco, which gained 2 points and touched 288, a new high record since its stock exchange listing. Copper stocks began to reflect the higher price of metal and the limited amounts of it held for sale here and abroad. Both Amalgamated and American Smelting made early gains.

A number of railroads were in demand. Union Pacific opened at an advance and then went still higher. Erie Common and preferred sold at a rise, as did Pennsylvania, Atchison and Reading. Steel common was another issue to attract. The customary reaction at the end of ten or fifteen minutes did not occur.

There was a firm tone to American stocks in the London market, although the volume of trading in them was not great. The copper group was buoyant there. The price of metal again advanced in that market, spot and futures selling 11s. 5d. higher. Rio Tintos at 80⅝, had gone up 1.

Copper Metal and Mining News.

It appears to be the general expectation that the report for May of the Copper Producers' Association on June 7 will show a further shrinkage of copper supplies in this country and be some it is figured that the production will be between 120,000 and 125,000,000 pounds. In fact any thousand pounds would not be surprising, in view of the fairness which producers are afraid that labor troubles in refineries are going to be a very material factor during the summer months. The red metal and Henry H. Merle & Co. report sales at Baltimore to have been the largest in years, the interest shown being divided between European consumers. The International Copper Co. has sold shipments of electrolytic copper by the above mentioned broker, several thousand tons having been taken for delivery in August and September. Some of the sales are reported to have been made at 14 cents, delivered abroad.

Dutch Fighting Standard Oil.

Holland interests which are in rivalry with Standard Oil are trying to induce the Dutch Government to forbid the granting to the Standard Kolonialen concern, a Rockefeller affiliation, of concessions in Dutch Borneo, Sumatra and Java. The Dutch and Standard Oil companies have teamed up in the past to fight the Shell Transport & Trading Co., Limited, and to offer the Shell concessions in Dutch territory in the Sumatran province of Djambie. It is said that several millions of dollars in bribes and counter bribes have been paid by the Shell and Standard companies, the latter being charged with the total of administration expenses before "dissolution."

Financial News in Brief.

The treasury work done by the Pennsylvania Railroad is not only extensive and complicated, but a means of supplying the company with the right kind of wood for ties. How to get enough timber for the thousands of miles of the great railroad system is one of the problems of American railroading.

The protective committee meeting held in New York for the financial rehabilitation of the Mexico Power & Securities Co. Ltd., which has defaulted on the $3,500,000 outstanding notes issue, probably will not be called together again for a month or two next month. The road needs $1,000,000 for betterments.

It is said that the House Judiciary Committee will formally report a bill which would enable the government to seize the 500,000 bags of coffee which have been piled up in the docks of the Coffee Trust for the purpose, it is claimed, of keeping up prices.

According to a Washington dispatch which relates to the House Judiciary Committee and the Beef Trust, "there will begin tomorrow an inquiry into the conditions that will make cattle and the principal effects along that line inaugurated by committee."

Southern cotton mills are prospering. From the Piedmont section comes the report that orders for yards of textile fabrics coming night and day and getting specs which show a good margin of profit. The Southern goods are more than the products of New England.

It is thought in New York that operators may withdraw the advance of 25 cents a ton in the price of coal and yet be able to escape the effects of government investigation upon charges that the Reading advance was in the nature of a trust.

President A. Barton Hepburn of the New York Chase National Bank is quoted as saying that the general sentiment seems to be the part of bankers to the Money Trust investigation being conducted by the Pujo Banking and Currency Committee, that committee will receive hearings in Washington on Thursday and Friday and it is expected that the series of witnesses to be summoned will not be made public until they have been served with notices to appear. The committee is insistent upon getting from banks lists of borrowers.

Bank clearings for May are figured by ross commercial agency a gain of 15.8 per cent, over 1911, an increase of 6.7 per cent. over the same month in 1910.

Orders for structural steel are now booked for 1,122,000 tons, and this is the best record for any month since the organization of the trust. Actual orders amounted to 420,000 tons, while contracts for fabricating 702,000 tons of finished steel were placed. Railroad demands for fabricated steel to the total 65,000 tons, but it is said that the railroad equipment orders for that month fell far short of 70,000 tons of fabricated steel.

Gross in steel prices is expected to be announced within a few days, a 5 per cent. funding basis, it is said, being under consideration by the Finance Committee of the United States Steel Corporation. Chairman Judge Gary, Vice Chairman Alexander E. Orr, Attorney Lewis Cass Ledyard, Counsel Frederick K. Miller and Counsel Albert A. Adams & Co., E. N. Farnsworth, Esterbrook & Co., Hornblower & Weeks, Kidder, Peabody & Co. and Perry Coffin & Burr of Boston, L. A. Pope & Co. of New York City, Chandler & Co. of Cleveland and Maynard S. Pird & Co. of Portland.

To-day's market reports show that the net earnings of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas road available for charges amounted to $1,121,000 against charges for the full fiscal year will approximate $13,450,000 to meet all charges, which will leave a surplus of $1,121,000 net during May and this month. The gross earnings of the system last week were $1,777,491 as compared with $1,660,000 for the corresponding week in 1911, and the estimated gross business during May was $7,000,000.

The Boston Elevated Management and the Men Should Get Together NOW and Not Dally Until It Is TOO LATE

The Great Lessons of the Philadelphia, Chicago, San Francisco and Columbus Street Car Strikes Should Be HEEDED and the PUBLIC Saved From the Direful Consequences of Like Trouble in Boston

The management of the Boston Elevated Railroad and the more than 8,000 employes of the company have reached a threatening crisis in a controversy over terms of employment. Murmurings of discontent on the part of the men have been growing in volume for several weeks.

The air is now filled with talk of a possible STRIKE.

The Boston Elevated Railroad Company does not want a strike. The employes, and especially the families of the employes, do not want a strike. The public is VEHEMENTLY OPPOSED to a strike.

Speaking in behalf of the public the AMERICAN takes this occasion to urge as strongly as lies in its power against the tying up of the street car system of this city by a strike.

After all, it is the PUBLIC that pays the wages of the railroad men and the PUBLIC that pays the salaries of the Boston Elevated officials and the PUBLIC that pays the dividends to the stockholders of the corporation.

It is to the PUBLIC, therefore, that first consideration should be given in the contemplation of a move of such vital importance.

The AMERICAN desires to call the attention of the management of the road and of the men to the necessity of GETTING TOGETHER on some basis BEFORE the breach is so wide that an adjustment of differences can only come after a long, bitter and COSTLY fight—COSTLY to the PUBLIC, to the COMPANY and to the EMPLOYES.

A strike of the employes of the Boston Elevated Railroad would practically prostrate business in this city.

It would throw out of work 8,000 men upon whom between 25,000 and 40,000 women and children depend for support.

It would cost hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of dollars.

It might cost the lives of many men.

AND IT WOULD END, WITHOUT DOUBT, IN A COMPROMISE.

Why not settle the trouble NOW, without paying the unavoidable penalty, in the way it must be settled in the end?

The AMERICAN is not indulging in mere guess-work in setting down these statements and in adjuring the company and the men to fix up their troubles before it is too late.

The facts are deduced from the story of four great street railway strikes. Railroad men will readily recall the salient facts of the strikes cited:

The Philadelphia strike cost $4,000,000. Five thousand out of 7,000 men were out. The strike was COMPROMISED and an official of the company stated that no street car company ever wholly WON A STRIKE with its men. The company is now dealing with its men as a BODY rather than as individuals.

The Chicago strike cost $500,000 and 4,500 men were out. The strike resulted in a COMPROMISE and the company now deals with its men through their organized body.

The San Francisco strike cost $7,000,000. Thirty-five hundred men were out. Several men were killed. Much property was destroyed. The great fire halted the strike. It was eventually COMPROMISED.

The Columbus strike lasted four months. It was very bitter. It cost $5,000,000. More than 2,500 men were out of work. Street cars were dynamited and hundreds injured. Troops were called out to quell the rioting. The trouble was COMPROMISED, the strikers winning minor concessions.

Here is the plain lesson of four great street car strikes, and there is no good reason to believe that a strike of the employes of the street car and subway system of Boston would have a result appreciably different.

In these strikes there was great money loss, great property loss, great business loss, great physical injury and in one case great loss of life.

The end in ALL cases was the same—COMPROMISE.

Boston as a city enjoys the distinction of being considered careful, conservative, level-headed. Here is a crisis calling for the display of these characteristics.

Would it not be inestimably wiser to REACH A SETTLEMENT NOW, before the turmoil and suffering of a big strike, than AFTER IT?

General Bancroft has called the attention of the men to the fact that the company has done much for them—paid good wages, established old age pensions, gave free legal advice, furnished coal at cost when it was scarce and furnished seats for motormen—and there is no doubt but these features of the service would be properly considered by the employes in an attempt to reach an agreement on the questions on which the company and the men are now at variance.

The main point is, that it is the DUTY of the management and of the men to SETTLE these matters between themselves NOW and not make the PUBLIC suffer because of their disputes.

GET TOGETHER NOW. DON'T WIDEN THE BREACH. DON'T LET THE TROUBLE RESULT IN A STRIKE!

He Never Had a Chance

That is what nine men out of ten who are failures say. Look out that you don't say it yourself.

No. 9

Things broke bad for Yum. He voted early and often, yet his boss was defeated, and the promised job proved to be a bloomer.

Yum was disgusted. Why shouldn't he be? How hard he tried to get along, yet things seemed to be against him. He pointed his nose toward the saloon on the corner and took a drink. Whiskey was as good as anything he could think of to drown his troubles in, and he drank it. He drank it until he tumbled into a chair by a table all alone.

Yum figured the whole thing out. Some one told him long ago that every man was the architect of his own fortune. Yum thought it over. Lots of them have had help; he knew it. He looked back to the days when he was a mere lad. He never had a chance; that was no kid. He tried, that is, he thought he tried, but he failed. He thought back to the time when he managed that fighter. The world lay enamelled before him. He had so far to go, yet it seemed beautiful. As he travelled along in tears he came nearer to the real world.

Then he found cracks in the enamel, rough places that hadn't been enamelled at all, pitfalls and crevasses. Now he was right in the midst of it all. There was no enamel. It was all an illusion. It was rougher than he had ever dreamed of, yet he had to go along.

He hadn't much hope, hence the booze. There he lay on the old table in the corner saloon moaning to himself. The regulars at the bar looked over at him sadly and remarked, "It's too bad; the kid can't handle the stuff."

The Man Who Admires Fat Women

By DOROTHY DIX

ORDINARILY the general public has scant sympathy with the woman who brings a breach of promise suit against the man who has promised to marry her and then welched on his bargain.

It fills us with disgust and repulsion to think of a woman exhibiting her heart wounds to the callous gaze of the public on the chance of getting a few dollars damages for her injuries, and we marvel that any one could be so lacking in every sense of delicacy that she would be able to drag to the altar the man who had tired of her and who was trying to break away.

But circumstances alter cases, and a breach of promise case is now to the fore in which the woman's loss, through the perfidy of her faithless swain, is so great, so overwhelming, so utterly irreparable that all ordinary opinion in such matters must be reversed, and the woman's actions condoned, if not justified.

The case in question is that of Miss Maud Mitten, who is suing Colonel Power, of Chicago, for $50,000 for breach of promise. It is said that Colonel Power is a rich mine owner, but that is an insignificant detail unworthy of consideration.

One Man, at Least, in the World Who Adores Fat

Colonel Power's money is the least of his desirable assets. What makes him the pearl of price, the incomparable, the greatly to be desired above all other men, is that he admires fat on the feminine frame. Do you get that, suffering sisters? He adores fat—not plumpness, but fat—and in the more than fourteen hundred sizzling love letters which he wrote Miss Mitten within the space of two years, and which form exhibit A, and B, and C, etc., etc., as evidence in her suit, the gallant Colonel uses the word "fat" continually, as an adjective of adulation instead of as an epithet of opprobrium, as is the common custom among men.

Over and over again in these letters he calls her "my beautiful fat Mitten," "my darling fat kitten," "my lovely fat girl," and so on, ringing the usual lover's changes on her perfections, but always striking the high note of his praises with the magic word "fat." She is, in turn, referred to as beautiful, adorable, fascinating, wonderful, but each of these terms of flattery is buttressed and bulwarked and crowned, and pinnacled, so to speak with fat.

$50,000 Too Little for the Loss of a Man Who Admires Fat

Is it any wonder that a lady who loves a man who admires fat on a woman tries to get him back by process of law, or any other way that she can? Is it to be marvelled at that, having been deprived of the prop and stay of the affection of such a man, she seeks what poor consolation $50,000 would give her?

Here is no common loss. An ordinary man with ordinary views on the straight front subject may be easily replaced if he wriggles off the matrimonial hook, and we may scorn the woman who is so poor a sport that she asks to be paid for the fun she did not have skill enough to land, but the man who adores fat women, whose love is of the elastic variety that spans a twenty-eight-inch waist, and who thinks there cannot be too much of a good thing, is of another breed. He is the treasure that only once in ten million times may the fisherwoman hope to bring up in her net, and when he is lost there is no balm in Gilead for her wounds.

Why fat and love should be as inimical as oil and water nobody knows. It is merely a fact, in poetry and romance the heroes are all tall and slender, and the heroines living skeletons. No woman falls in love with a fat man. No man ever thinks of falling in love with a fat woman. That is why women torture themselves to keep thin, and why, when one woman wants to be catty to another, she says, "My dear, how well you are looking! You've gained at least twenty pounds since I saw you last, haven't you?"

Only women who go through the agony of starvation and of being flayed alive by masseurs, and who exercise to the point of fainting with fatigue, in order to keep down their adipose tissue, know what luck has happened to a fat woman when a man condescends to notice her, much less to fall in love with her, and only women will know how to estimate the misfortune one has sustained in having lost a lover who prefers curves to angles, and a comfortable, well-fed appearing lady to a female who has a lean and hungry look.

With the present mania for scrawniness in women, it is generally conceded that fat is the unpardonable sin, and that for a wife to permit herself to grow stout is sufficient cause for her husband to pension her off on alimony and get a new stringy mate. Think, then, of the blighting disappointment of this woman, who has just missed getting a husband who liked fat and who would have loved his wife better as the years went by and she pulled down the scales at a heavier and heavier notch

Picture the Happiness of Being Able to Eat All You Want

Picture the happiness and the calm peace of mind of a woman who could sit down to a good dinner and eat all she wanted, untroubled by the thought that everything she liked was fattening, and that she got fat at her peril. Could any money pay for the loss of such domestic felicity as that —an Eden into which the serpent of obesity had never entered?

The fair plaintiff in this case has a just cause, and one that will make an irresistible appeal to the sympathies of her sex. If she is wise she will demand to be tried by a jury of fat women—and what they will do to the defendant will be a shame.

There Are 240 Members of the House of Representatives; Every Man in Massachusetts Envies Them Their Opportunity Today

Orators Have Told Us a Thousand Times How the Port of Boston Should Be Developed, Students Have Dreamed About It, Politicians Have Drawn Up Resolutions, Architects Have Drawn Plans, BUT THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES CAN TODAY PLACE BOSTON IN DIRECT COMMUNICATION WITH CHICAGO AND THE WHEAT FIELDS OF THE CANADIAN NORTHWEST, CAN BRING TO BOSTON ITS FIRST GREAT TRUNK LINE, BY PASSING THE GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY BILL

Having met with the most severe rebuff ever administered by the Massachusetts Senate to the interests—in his effort to keep the Grand Trunk out and maintain a Morgan fence around New England—it now remains to be seen how much dust Mr. Mellen may be able to throw in the eyes of the members of the House.

The Grand Trunk Railway bill is again before the House, this time for concurrence in amendments made by the State Senate.

The bill in its present form is satisfactory to the Board of Railroad Commissioners, the Directors of the Port of Boston, the savings banks, so far as it affects them, and, broadly speaking, the shippers and travelers of Massachusetts. While it is not the bill asked for by the Grand Trunk officials, it is acceptable to them, also.

So far as appears at this time—IN THE OPEN—there is no objection to the bill save that raised at the eleventh hour by the Public Franchise League. This organization, as we understand it, objects to the provision of the bill that a railroad corporation may operate steamship companies.

The petition of the Public Franchise League with reference to this provision is PROBABLY SOUND, but even the Public Franchise League CANNOT BE EXCUSED FOR RUSHING TO THE LEGISLATURE WITH ELEVENTH-HOUR AMENDMENTS TO LEGISLATION WHICH HAS BEEN UNDER PUBLIC DISCUSSION FOR MONTHS. The Public Franchise League would have spoken earlier with better results.

It may be that the fact that the mover of the Public Franchise amendment—a statesman heretofore not prominently mentioned in connection with progressive legislation—quoted the "Boston Chamber of Commerce" as also favorable to the amendment, had something to do with its defeat.

After its experience with the Senator Edric Eldridge amendment—which also was SAID to have the approval of the Chamber but which actually DID NOT HAVE THAT APPROVAL—and after the sorry exhibition made by the William M. Flanders ALLEGED Chamber of Commerce petition, the honorable Senate was naturally and justifiably shy of ANYTHING offered loosely in the Chamber's name.

However that may be, the Grand Trunk bill is out of the Senate and in the House again.

This bill OUGHT to be acceptable to the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

There are at least two sections of the bill which help the New Haven as much as they favor the Grand Trunk. These are the bonding section and the steamship section.

If the Boston AMERICAN were to write the Grand Trunk bill, the steamship provision would most likely be conspicuous by its absence.

They say, however, that legislation is largely a matter of compromise, and the surest way to get the Grand Trunk Railway for New England will be for the House of Representatives to pass the bill as it has come back from the Senate. To do otherwise will be to risk the appointment of a committee of conference and the falling of the bill between the branches.

To those members of the Chamber of Commerce who were hoodwinked into signing the William M. Flanders petition because of the fear that Massachusetts is not really getting the Grand Trunk through the pending bill, the AMERICAN desires only to point out the provisions of Section 10 of Part 1:

> The powers herein granted to the Southern New England Railroad Corporation are granted upon condition that AT LEAST A MAJORITY OF ITS CAPITAL STOCK, already or hereafter from time to time issued, SHALL BE SUBSCRIBED AND PAID FOR BY THE GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY OF CANADA, and satisfactory proof thereof furnished within a reasonable time to the Board of Railroad Commissioners. Such certificates of stock constituting such majority SHALL HAVE PRINTED OR STAMPED UPON THE FACE THEREOF THE PROVISIONS OF THIS SECTION, and no transfer of any shares in such capital stock by the Grand Trunk Railway which shall reduce its holdings of said shares below a majority thereof shall be valid or pass any title to the transferee, and the Southern New England Railroad Corporation is prohibited from making any such transfer unless the General Court of Massachusetts shall consent thereto.

It is safe to say that nine-tenths of the gentlemen who signed the Flanders petition—on the representation of canvassers and printed cards that there was "NOTHING IN THE BILL TO BIND THE GRAND TRUNK"—were not told of this provision.

We congratulate the Senate and these hoodwinked Flanders petitioners that the former paid no attention to the letter.

As for Mr. William M. Flanders, we leave the CASE of Mr. Flanders and his movement, and his EXPENSIVE ADVERTISING, to the Directors of the Chamber of Commerce.
